ODD ASSORTMENT of individuals, some dressed in strange garb, lined up Thursday morning in shopping centre parking lot to pose for picture. Why were they there? What were they doing? Turn to page 11 and find out just what they were up to. It might just open your eyes — especially if you're one of the thousands of commuters who fight traffic every morning to reach the downtown area.

Chlorine explosion a warning

City fire officials today warned the public to use extreme caution in handling a common chlorine-based disinfectant after the material caused a violent explosion at the city works yard Thursday sending four men to hospital.

Deputy fire chief Fred Severson said the disinfectant, calcium hypochlorite, commonly used to clean out swimming pools and shower rooms, reacts violently when mixed with ethylene or glycerol.

He called the risk serious, particularly because the chemicals are present in many common compounds such as grease, oil and anti-freeze.

Thursday afternoon city water works employees Bud Jones and Mike Matthews were pouring some granules of calcium hypochlorite into a container in a small room in the Garbally Road works yard when there was a blast.

Both men were knocked across the room. Jones, who was standing over the container, was extensivly burned on his hands and face while Matthews escaped the full blast but was burned on his arms.

Two other employees, George Pakos, 27, and Jim Walker, heard the explosion, pulled the injured men to safety and despite thick smoke and chlorine gas fought their way back into the room to put out the flames with a dry chemical extinguisher.

The incident occurred shortly after 4 p.m.

All four were taken to Victoria General Hospital but only Jones was admitted. He is in good condition.

Pakos and Walker, president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees Union that covers the city's outside workers, were checked for possible lung damage due to smoke and gas inhalation. Matthews was treated and released.

The fire caused about $400 damage.

Firemen, wearing masks and protective clothing, returned to the yard this morning to ventilate the room after workmen refused to enter.

Pakos said it was fortunate more persons weren't injured. The shift was just preparing to go home and within five minutes 15 workers would have been in the room to fill out their time sheets.

Severson said an investigation completed by Insp. Graham McCallum determined Jones and Matthews were using a container that had once contained some anti-freeze.

"There were probably only a few drops left, but that is all it would take," Severson said.

McCallum said that while calcium hypochlorite is included in the National Fire Association list of hazardous materials, its dangers are not commonly known.

Severson was concerned about pool owners using old anti-freeze containers to store or carry the disinfectant.

He also noted explosions have been caused by persons dipping into cartons of the chemical with metal scoops contaminated with grease or oil.

But the dangers don't end there, he warned. If the chemical gets damp due to rain or seepage, deadly chlorine gas is given off.

The chemical is safe in areas flooded with water because the gas is adequately dissipated.

Phone call breached privilege

Atlin NDP MLA Al Passarell said Thursday his member's privilege was breached by a Hansard staff member who relayed the text of a speech in the B.C. legislature directly to the Church of Scientology in Vancouver.

Passarell earlier complained in the legislature about a government decision to give 10 acres of Crown land near Atlin in northern B.C. to the church.

He called the church members undesirable and said many members of the sect have been charged with violent crimes.

The speech was relayed to the church's Vancouver office by a member of the legislature's Hansard staff, complete with that staff member's personal opinion and moral judgment of the speech, Passarell said Thursday afternoon.

Daring gem heist

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said a young man made off with 32 large diamonds in a daring jewel heist at Eaton's Pacific Centre store in downtown Vancouver.

The man, in his 20s, entered the store just before closing time and asked a clerk to show him the store's largest and most expensive diamonds.

When the clerk turned her back, police said, the man scooped up the jewels and ran out the front door.

Mt. St. Helens spewing again

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens shot another plume of steam and ash skyward today in a new "pulse" from the volcano, continuing the activity that began with Thursday's eruption. (See earlier story on page 18).

New energy act puts controls on Hydro

Legislation setting up a B.C. Utilities Commission to establish a review process for major energy projects and bring B.C. Hydro under public regulatory control was introduced in the legislature today.

Bill 52, the Utilities Commission Act, marks a new era in utilities management, Energy Minister Bob McClelland told a press conference after bringing in the bill.

The new commission replaces the former B.C. Energy Commission and for the first time establishes a major energy projects review process.

McClelland also said the act brings Hydro under public regulatory control for the first time since the Crown corporation was established in 1964 when the province nationalized the old B.C. Electric.

The new commission will take over the role of regulating gas and electricity rates from the B.C. Energy Commission. B.C. Hydro rates are specifically included in the regulatory process, a departure from past policy.

"Once the act comes into force, proposed rate increases will be subject to public hearings before the utilities commission, insuring a rate structure for energy which is fair to all and which is consistent with over-all government energy policy," McClelland said.

The new act also includes a section setting up the energy projects review process, by which all electric power projects, transmission lines, oil and gas pipelines and "energy transshipment terminals or storage facilities" will be subject to review by the commission.

Staff for the review process will come from the provincial government and the commission itself, McClelland said, and a specific review panel may include, in addition to utilities commissioners, a number of designated temporary commissioners.

These may be members of the public, industry officials or government employees, he said.

Although the legislation establishes a review process — unknown in the past — the provincial government still retains considerable powers over the review process.

McClelland and Environment Minister Stephen Rogers will establish terms of reference for hearings on each project.

Subject to the review process will be:

—Electric power plants, hydro or thermal, with a capacity of 20 megawatts or more, and additions to existing plants.

—Energy-use projects which use, convert or process three PJ or more per year of total energy resources and coal.

McClelland said, for example, three PJ of energy are equivale[illegible] approximately 2.8 billion cubic feet of natural gas, 482,000 barrels of crude oil, 95 megawatts of electricity or 240,000 tons of thermal coal.

—Electric transmission lines of 500 kilowatts or greater.

—Pipelines capable of transporting 16 PJ or more per year of liquid or gaseous hydrocarbons or solids.

—Energy transshipment terminals or storage facilities with a capacity of 2.8 billion cubic feet of natural gas or 482,000 barrels of crude oil.

The commission regulation of utility rates will include prices charged by B.C. Hydro for electricty and gas, service standards and additions to hydro facilities.

However, the cabinet and the legislature will continue to have power over Hydro's borrowing and the finance minister will continue as the corporation's fiscal agent.

The legislation also provides for provincial regulation of telecommunications within B.C., once this responsibility has been turned over to the province by Ottawa.

The Utilities Commission Act also will cover export of energy from B.C. Proposed exports will have to go through the same review process as energy projects.

Exemptions are provided for contracts already in force, export licences and permits issued by the federal National Energy Board prior to the act coming into force and exports which are exempted by regulation.

This last category covers such things as aircracft and ship refueling, McClelland said.

Increase in murders in wake of executions

BOSTON (AP) — Statistics indicate the murder rate in New York state increased following the execution of criminals, report two researchers who say the results indicate the death penalty may encourage crime rather than deter it.

"This is a punishment that requires the sacrifice of innocent people," one of the researchers, William Bowers, said in an interview.

He said the study countered the argument of those who contend would-be murderers are deterred by the prospect of being executed for their crimes.

"If executions have a brutalizing effect, as we find, a whole new issue is raised on capital punishment," Bowers said.

In a study to be published in October in The Journal of Crime and Delinquency Bowers and Glenn Pierce say they traced the history of executions in New York between 1907 and 1963. The study says that on the average, there were two additional homicides in the month after an execution.

The researchers, both of whom are associated with the Centre for Applied Social Research at Northeastern University, say the number of murders prompted by executions may actually be higher because their study did not take into account killings in the same month as the executions.

The researchers do not know exactly how executions may provoke homicides, Bowers said.

However, the two say one theory is that people are not deterred from crime by executions because they cannot identify with criminals who are executed.

Texas braced for storm

MERIDA, Mexico (AP) — Hurricane Allen roared toward the Texas coast this afternoon, about 700 kilometres away, gathering strength from warm Gulf of Mexico waters after hitting Caribbean islands where reports from devastated areas boosted the death toll to at least 87.

The U.S. National Weather Service issued a hurricane warning and forecasters said the storm, expected to pick up speed, could send hurricane-force winds slamming into the Texas coast from Corpus Christi to Brownsville by dawn Saturday.

At noon today, Allen was located near 23.8 north latitude and 91.4 west longitude — some 670 kilometres east southeast of Brownsville and travelling west-northwest at 30 kilometres an hour, packing winds up to 230 kilometres an hour, the weather service said.

Hurricane force winds extended outward 120 kilometres to the north and 80 kilometres to the south.

Miracle drug or potential poison?

DMSO — miracle painkiller or a potentially toxic, highly dangerous substance?

That question as yet remains unanswered but some Victoria doctors and a growing number of athletes and arthritis sufferers swear by it.

DMSO — dimethyl sulphoxide — is a cheap and plentiful byproduct of the pulp and paper industry used as an industrial solvent and as a common ingredient of paint-remover.

Its use in the U.S. and Canada as a prescription drug for muscular injuries and arthritic-type conditions has raised controversy, especially since a 60 Minutes TV program this year lauded its beneficial value in the treatment of aching joints.

So far in Canada DMSO is recognized in a recent decision by the federal health protection branch for treating only two conditions: interstitial cystitis (a bladder ailment), and scleroderma (a hardening and drying of the skin related to arthritis, incureable).

But more and more doctors are prescribing it for use as a liniment.

Some users report spectacular results for bruises and other athletic injuries while others swear it helps ease the pain of arthritis.

In Victoria DMSO costs $30 a litre and a prescription of 100 ml for about $3 would last a long time, one pharmacist said.

He said his firm stocks DMSO for prescription purposes and has filled about 30 orders since the 60 Minutes program.

But he added that such programs and newspaper reports about DMSO's pain-treating properties have caused a lot of people to grasp at it without an appreciation of its potential hazards.

Liver damage is one of the possible side effects, he said, and careless or accidental use in combination with toxic substances could be dangerous.

"For example, a person who applied DMSO to his skin then went into the garden and came into contact with pesticide or was stung by wasps could be in trouble," he said, adding that DMSO is a vehicle that transports substances easily through skin barriers to the bloodstream.

Meanwhile, two British researchers familiar with non-medical uses of the compound said here Thursday they are not aware of any harmful effects from it.

No flight plan sparks search

A pilot's failure to close his flight plan triggered an unnecessary air search today.

The pilot, identified only as Marsden, left Dawson Creek at 6:10 p.m. Thursday in a Beaver float plane, saying he was flying to Tatogga Lake.

He asked that a search be started if he didn't report in 24 hours.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said today a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox, working in the Watson Lake area, was alerted and began searching.

Marsden had fuelled at Tatogga Lake and carried on to Pucho Lake.

The Buffalo found the aircraft and the pilot at Pucho Lake after being informed by Trans Pacific, a commercial airline, that he had been spotted in that area.

The search came at the same time the federal government announced it spent $90 million on search and rescue operations last year and saved more than 1,700 lives.

But the government said many of those lives would not have been endangered if the public took the proper precautions when flying or sailing in private craft.

Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne said Thursday $90 million spent last year could well increase this year and next if amateur fliers and mariners don't take responsibility for their own safety.

Arab oil reprisals loom over Israel

United Press International

Ten Arab countries, led by Saudi Arabia and Iraq, are threatening economic and diplomatic reprisals against nations endorsing Israel's claim to sovereignty over all Jerusalem, raising the possibility their oil may be used as a weapon.

Saudi Arabia and Iraq announced in a joint communique Wednesday they will break off diplomatic and economic relations with any country recognizing Jerusalem as Israel's capital.

On Thursday, the two countries were joined by Kuwait, Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Jordan, North Yemen, Algeria and Mauritania.

"The leaders of the eight countries pledged to take a unified stand in the face of Israel's conspiracies and expansionist ambitions," in particular thevote of the Israeli parliament last week making Jerusalem its "eternal" capital, the Kuwaiti news agency said.

Oil was not mentioned, but its use as a weapon was an implicit threat, Western experts said. Oil is by far the Arab world's biggest economic resource — and certainly the one with the most telling impact.

Saudi Arabia is the leading foreign supplier of oil to the United States, and two of the other nations, Algeria and the United Arab Emirates, rank fourth and eighth, respectively.

The Jerusalem issue also dominated other Mideast developments Thursday.

At the United Nations, the special committee on Palestinian rights charged that Israel's Jerusalem declaration displayed "contempt for international law."

Ambassador Falilou Kane of Senegal, chairman of the committee, said in a letter to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim that Israel persistently ignored U.N. resolutions calling for an end to its occupation and annexation of Arab lands.

President Anwar Sadat broke off the Palestinian autonomy negotiations in protest last weekend and sent Begin a letter, rejecting the Israeli move and affirming the Arab claim to the holy city.

Meanwhile, former foreign minister Moshe Dayan said today Israel faces a mounting international offensive that could lead to the end of the Jewish state and said Parliament's declaration of sovereignty over all of Jerusalem — was "totally unnecessary" legislation.

Dayan said the government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin should have ensured the bill on sovereignty over Jerusalem died in committee.

Passenger train off rails

BLUE RIVER (CP) — A Via Rail Canada supercontinental passenger train derailed near Blue River early today.

The train was carrying 360 persons but, said Bill Dewan, a spokesman for Canadian National Railway, only one passenger was apparently injured.

Cause of the derailment, which occurred about 11 kilometres east of Blue River, has yet to be determined.

The lone injury involved a broken arm.

Dewan said the train was eastbound from Vancouver.

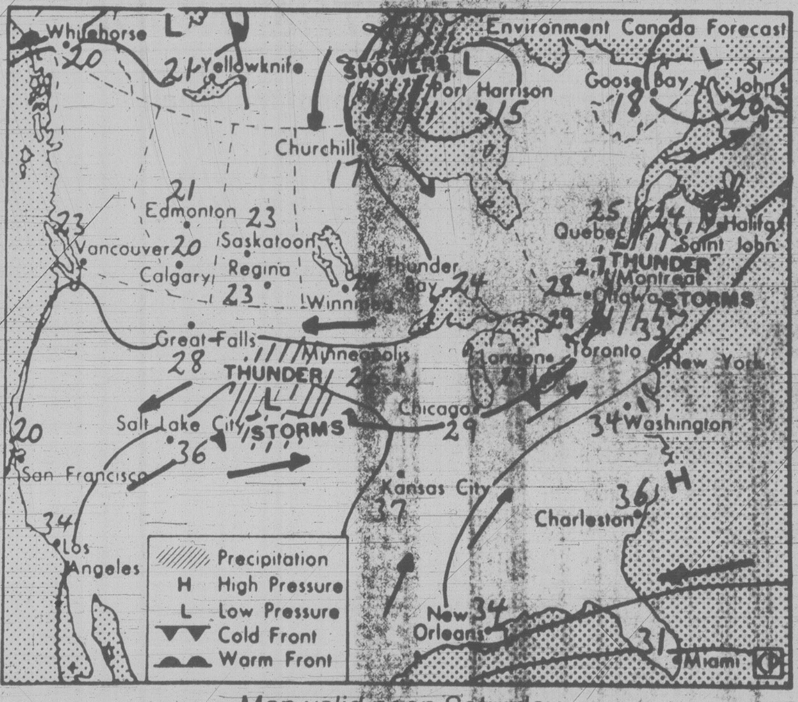

Map valid noon Saturday

Low clouds and fog persisted along B.C.'s exposed outer coasts. Skies elsewhere were mainly clear. Isolated showers or thundershowers are still likely to develop during the afternoon but should be confined to the eastern interior. A ridge of high pressure building from the northwest will result in mainly sunny skies over most of the province for the next couple of days. Some cloud and showers will spread across northern portions of B.C. tonight.

Educate the public, solar experts agree

VANCOUVER (CP) — While solar energy experts may disagree on which solar systems are most effective, there is one point of unanimous agreement: the public knows little about it.

Keynote speakers addressing a joint international conference on solar energy this week at the University of British Columbia repeatedly stressed that the public must be educated if solar and other renewable energy sources are ever to enjoy widespread use.

One research paper presented to the five-day meeting of solar experts noted that "the average American has a better understanding of how a nuclear reactor operates than how the sun heats up his house."

Some analysts also say that as long as fossil fuels remain relatively cheap, solar energy systems will never be popular or ultimately understood.

But it is generally accepted that with major fuels such as oil expected to be depleted in 20 years, North American society must cultivate renewable energy technology now if those sources are to be economical by the year 2000.

Those considering solar energy for the home can choose from two basic types of technology — active or passive.

An active system is one in which thermal energy is pumped or blown from a collector device, usually a panel on a roof, to a storage compartment inside the house.

A control system, which compares temperatures inside the collector storage area and the home, regulates the flow of heat as required.

Passive systems are ones in which the flow of thermal energy is by natural means such as conduction, natural convection and radiation rather than an outside source of energy. These are most often incorporated by architecturat design such as increasing the south face of a building to allow in more light, adding more insulation or double glazing windows.

A popular alternative is a hybrid of the two types with mechanical devices added to passive systems to assist in storing or transferring heat in a home.

Costs of such systems will vary widely with specific conditions, with some simple systems running as little as $150 if a homeowner installs it himself or thousands of dollars for elaborate ones.

The growth of the industry also will depend on what action governments take to encourage use of renewable resources.

The federal government was criticized frequently by conference delegates for keeping the price of Canadian oil artificially low and thereby discouraging solar energy which initially can be more costly than continuing use of conventional fuels.

Some delegates argued that the government should automatically set minimum energy use standards for residences, which would promote the solar industry.

B.C. can't sell all of its gas

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Petroleum Corp. won't be able to sell all the natural gas the corporation will buy from B.C. producers this year.

Don Rawlyk, corporation general manager, said Tuesday gas sales in the United States will fall about 20 billion cubic feet short of the volume the B.C. government must pay for.

The Crown corporation must take minimum volumes of gas from producers in the province and anything less than the minimum must be paid for anyway.

Hospitable Island hermit missing, feared drowned

TURTLE ISLAND (CP) — A hospitable hermit known to thousands of Vancouver Island boaters and fishermen has vanished and RCMP fear he has drowned.

Salal Joe, known as the unofficial guardian of Barkley Sound, lived in a tiny floating shack at this isolated island, one of the Broken Islands group about 140 kilometres northwest of Victoria, for nearly two decades.

A police spokesman from Port Alberni said Wednesday a search for Joe has been called off, but periodic checks throughout the Broken Islands group in Barkley Sound will continue.

Joe, whose shunned his real name of Joe Wilkowski and called himself Salal Joe, was reported missing July 20 by a park warden after his cabin was discovered unlocked and his four-metre boat was missing.

The boat was later found on the rocks at nearby Chalk Island with two holes in the hull and the engine throttle wide open. An extensive search involving the Canadian Coast Guard, RCMP and dozens of fishermen and friends from the coastal villages of Bamfield and Ucluelet was unsuccessful.

Joe had said he was born in Iran about 50 years ago and raised in Poland. After the Second World War he emigrated to the Prairies.

Although he occasionally mentioned a wife and child, RCMP say Joe left no known relatives and details of his citizenship are hazy.

He originally earned a living in the Broken Islands gathering salal, a thick, green coastal plant, and selling it to Vancouver florists. He later sold clams to fish processers in Bamfield and did odd jobs for Parks Canada.

But through the winter Joe spent months alone in his cabin with his cat, Chico. Heavy snows would occasionally threaten to sink his boat and violent storms would bring two metre waves crashing into the cove.

Energy cuts raising risks?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Energy-saving measures by some airlines and aircraft manufacturers are jeopardizing the safety of aircraft, the president of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association said Thursday.

But a spokesman for Boeing, largest commercial aircraft builder in the world, disputed a claim by Captain Rollie Cook at a convention of aviation experts that plans to put two-man, instead of three-man, crews on new Boeing 757 and 767 aircraft are wrong.

Reduction of flightdeck crews member is seen as partial compensation for increased fuel costs.

Boeing spokesman Scott Gilson said technical advances in flightdeck instrumentation reduces workload, allowing one member to be cut from the crew.

Pepin sees 1,600 jobs in Nanaimo

Construction will begin immediately on a shipping terminal at Nanaimo after Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin signed an agreement Thursday with B.C. officials.

The 25-hectare Duke Point terminal in the city on the eastern coast of Vancouver Island will be the largest forest-products shipping terminal in the province, the minister's office said.

Pepin said there could be up to 1,600 new jobs in the area, once the terminal is completed, probably within two years.

The first stage of the project is expected to cost $20.5 million, a spokesman for the Nanaimo harbor commission said in an interview from Nanaimo.

Work will begin first on a deep-sea loading berth, a barge berth and 4.8 hectares of paved assembly wharf.

Two charged in restaurant blaze

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Two men have been charged with arson and conspiracy to commit arson after fire destroyed a restaurant last year at 100 Mile House in the south Cariboo.

Brazil Zouzouras, 50, of Vancouver, owner of the restaurant, and Eric Irwin Findlay, 26, will appear in Kamloops provincial court Sept. 3. Findlay, a former resident of 100 Mile House, now lives at Clearwater.

Psychiatric examination ordered

VANCOUVER (CP) — A psychiatric assessment was ordered Thursday for Arthur Ahearn, 21, of Langley, when he indicated he wanted to plead guilty to seven charges laid after a hostage incident in a city park.

A gunman was shot in the abdomen and upper legs by police at the climax of the three-hour incident May 7, while Debbie Reid, 16, was wounded in the arm and leg by a shotgun blast that came as the gunman was struck by police bullets.

Ahearn originally elected trial by judge and jury, but before a preliminary hearing could begin Thursday, said in provincial court that he wanted to plead guilty to the charges.

Ahearn is charged with four counts of unlawful confinement, possession of a dangerous weapon, unlawful use of a firearm, and attempted murder.

Public's opinion of whales sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation has commissioned Gallup Poll to ask Canadians what they think about whales.

The poll will ask whether Canadians believe whales are endangered, whether there is a need for modern nations to kill whales, and whether Canada's no vote on a proposed moratorium on commercial whaling should be changed.

The international conservation group said it will take the results, expected in October, to Ottawa in hopes of backing up its protest against Canada's whaling commission vote.

Home-made bomb used in van blast

KAMLOOPS (CP) — An explosion Saturday which caused $2,500 damage to a five-ton furniture van was caused by a small homemade bomb, RCMP said Thursday.

The truck was parked at the rental firm's lot in the city's downtown area when the bomb went off at about 10 p.m. The blast ripped off the roof and blew a 60-centimetre-square hole in the aluminum box on a Budget rental truck and punctured holes in the sides of three other trucks. No injuries were reported.

Small in comparison

A slanging match has developed between B.C. Economic Development Minister Don Phillips and Senator Ray Perrault about Ottawa's refusal to contribute a $3-per-tonne subsidy to the proposed northeastern coal project.

The province wanted to offer a $5-per-tonne subsidy to the companies so they could in turn offer a better deal on price to the Japanese who are considering buying 5.3 million tonnes of coal a year. However, Victoria wanted Ottawa to pay 60 per cent of the shot.

Ottawa says, reasonably enough, that it doesn't think it makes sense to offer direct subsidies to Japanese steel companies and multi-national coal companies so they can take our nonrenewable natural resources out of the country.

What has so far been overlooked in the shouting, however, is the fact that the hidden subsidies to the transportation part of the project may end up being far more than $5 a tonne.

At the moment the best price the coal companies can offer Japan is $86 a tonne. That is over $10 a tonne more than the Japanese are paying now for coal from southeast B.C. and they aren't impressed with the offer. The $5 subsidy would reduce the price to $81 a tonne, which might be more appealing.

However, some statistics suggest that even at $86 a tonne, the provincial government will be providing a subsidy of at least $9 a tonne.

The statistics come from Social Credit maverick backbencher Jack Davis, a professional engineer and former energy minister for the province.

Davis notes that the total charge being assessed against the companies for the building of the new rail spur line necessary to get the coal to port is $4 per tonne.

The cost estimate of the spur line is $315 million in 1979 dollars. However, says Davis, by the time interest and inflation are taken into account, the cost at completion in 1985 will be, in 1985 dollars, between $400 million and $500 million. Using the usual formulas of Canada's major railways in this sort of investment, some 20 per cent of that amount, $90 million a year, should be set aside for servicing the debt.

If only 5.3 million tonnes of coal are to be moved a year, that means each ton is costing $17 per tonne, rather than the $4 being charged the companies. If, as Phillips has suggested, the amount will soon rise to 7.5 million tonnes, the cost of the rail line annually will be $13 per tonne. The break-even point, it appears, will be somewhere approaching 25 million tonnes a year.

Davis assumes that figure won't be reached until the year 2000; in the meantime, he estimates, the provincial government could have effectively subsidized the coal rail line for as much as $500 million.

It makes the argument about a $3 per tonne subsidy look small in comparison.

Meaningless controversy

The controversy over economist Garth Edge's first report on the feasibility of a fixed link between Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland should surely win an award for Most Meaningless Controversy of 1980.

Just why questions about it should so infuriate Science Minister Pat McGeer that he became involved in an altercation with a CBC cameraman is even more difficult to understand.

Edge's key recommendation is that no decision should be made on a fixed link for at least two years.

That has to be one of the world's safest recommendations. There isn't a chance in a million that the government would make a decision in less than two years, no matter what Edge had said.

Edge is the first of a number of consultants to complete extremely preliminary studies on the fixed link idea. It will be several months before even these most rudimentary reports are finished.

After that, the cabinet will have to decide whether to proceed with more detailed studies, a process taking at least another month or two.

If cabinet then decided to go ahead, the detailed studies would certainly take more than a year to complete. Full studies of the engineering requirements of a link, the economics of building one, and the environmental and social impact of a link would more likely take two or three years.

After that, the cabinet would have to study them all before making a final decision — another two or three months.

Edge's recommendations have changed nothing.

Patriotic minister

In a column two weeks ago Barbara McLintock discussed this government's attitude towards Confederation and included in the article some quotes attributed to unnamed cabinet ministers. In a later article she criticized cabinet ministers for not denying that they made those statements.

May I say at the outset that none of those statements were made by me; in fact I believe the one concerning "high noon" was in fact made by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Secondly, while I did have the pleasure of saying hello to Barbara in the corridor a couple of weeks ago, I don't believe I've had the pleasure of talking to her about anything much less the Constitution, since we appeared together on radio last February on the night of the federal election.

Thirdly, not only did I not make any of the statements attributed to members of our cabinet, I have not heard any of them made either. To set the record straight, I have devoted an enormous amount of time and effort toward preserving Canadian unity.

It is true that I have articulated British Columbia's position, that I'm a strong believer in federalism and a division of powers which leaves both federal and provincial government in a strong position to discharge their responsibilities, but that does not, surely make me less a Canadian. For my own newspapers I have written scores of columns on the question of Canadian unity and constitutional reform and I have been privileged to speak on more occasions than I care to remember all across Canada and the United States on the subject. Until recently I attended, as minister responsible, all constitutional conferences and I appeared before both the Senate Committee and the Joint Senate — House of Commons committee on Bill C16. I also appeared before the Pepin-Robarts Commission on four or five occasions, both formally and informally, and I have been privileged to deal with virtually everybody in this nation who is directly concerned with constitutional reform.

I would not have made this effort if I did not believe strongly in a united country. I am indeed a firm believer that the regions must be strong and I'm a strong advocate for redressing injustices done to the West in general and to B.C. in particular. It's because of that belief that I strongly support proposals put forward by British Columbia in the fall of 1978.

I sincerely hope that for these and many other reasons you are able to conclude that I am not only a strong believer in British Columbia but that I also am a patriotic Canadian. To the extent that any of your articles have left doubt on that score, you are very much in error — K. Rafe Mair, Minister of Health.

Avoid export tax

Many countries subsidize exports. Few, however, tax them. The reason export taxes are unpopular isn't hard to find. They discourage production and by undermining otherwise healthy industries they limit the revenue available to the government that imposed them.

An export tax, in other words, is a short-sighted measure. Capital is frightened away and jobs become scarce. An otherwise healthy sector of the economy slows down and the growth potential of the nation suffers as a result.

This has happened with oil in Canada. Production has declined since 1974 when the petroleum industry was first hit by an export tax. Self sufficiency has given way to imports and Canadians now find themselves in the ridiculous position of paying foreigners twice as much for their oil as we are prepared to pay our own people at home.

What will happen if an export tax is applied to all forms of energy in this country? The search for natural gas will slow down. The construction of hydro-electric projects in Northern Quebec and Manitoba will be postponed. Exports of coal from Western Canada will be limited to existing contracts. And the possibility of converting low grade fuels into electricity and selling it in nearby areas of the United States will be ruled out altogether.

The loss of revenue in these energy source areas is bad enough. But the real killer is uncertainty. A government which imposes a tax without warning can strike again. It makes investors nervous and workers look elsewhere for employment. It puts a stop to the kind of growth which, under free market conditions, would have been beneficial to all concerned.

Import duties are different. They protect certain industries from foreign competition. They therefore encourage production at home. International agreements often perpetuate them. Not so an export tax. Unilaterally imposed, it has the effect of stopping a resource industry in its tracks.

An export tax, unlike an import duty, is highly selective. It hurts a particular industry in a given area. It discriminates against those parts of the country which may be said to be resource-rich from a developmental point of view. It favors Canadian consumers who are many over producers of export commodities who are few. It hurts our bread-and-butter industries at a time when we need them most.

Any government that imposes an export tax is opposed to free trade. Instead of reinforcing success it props up weakness. It slams on the brakes when our economy should be surging ahead. Ottawa, if it is at all interested in more jobs and better pay for Candians will therefore do what other countries have done: avoid export taxes like the plague. — Jack Davis, MLA, North Vancouver-Seymour.

Sunday shopping

Advertising in British Columbia papers for Sunday selling is nearly seven times as great as in five other provinces together, reports the Canadian Press Clipping Service, from January to May 1980 inclusive. It is 644 as against 93.

This does not reflect so much different citizens' attitudes as it does the non-interference policy of the present administration, in enforcement of Sunday closing law.

Far from rectifying it, Bill No. 8, The Holiday Closing Act, will tend to worsen the situation; it is very widely believed in the province and elsewhere in Canada.

There seems to be some weakening recently in the adamant wall carefully erected by all government spokesmen to date, when the Attorney-General declares he is awaiting public input.

The government needs to heed the extremely strong reaction against the bill, and enact legislation that has province-wide application. Why should municipalities throughout the province have unloaded upon them the task, time, inconvenience and cost of preparing and conducting referendums, when the A-G could simplify the whole process?

Let the government realize that people do not need more Sunday business operation than necessity requires, for Sunday and holiday freedom from employment is a positive factor in human living, and cannot be dispensed with except at cost to us all. — Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Road.

Steaming pools

It's not long now before Victoria will have to stop resting on laurels gathered through years of involvement in the tourist industry. Some members of this city's council insist on virtually ignoring environmental problems while expending much energy and money on development of tourist attractions. We are having to fight to keep the attraction of both clean air and water.

Last weekend I was enticed to abandon my usual distant sandy beach to find a small Gonzales Bay corner on which to catch some sun. Not only was the air foul, but the beach was strewn with much questionable debris. Each time one young sun-bather, in the interest of exercise, ventured to pad his little feet in the steaming pools left behind by the tide, I cringed and wondered what he'd get besides warts.

I applaud all those individuals who are taking issue with city council's hesitation to provide a sewage treatment system that other cities of equal and lesser size enjoy. — K. Bishop, 589 Toronto Street.

DAN TURNER

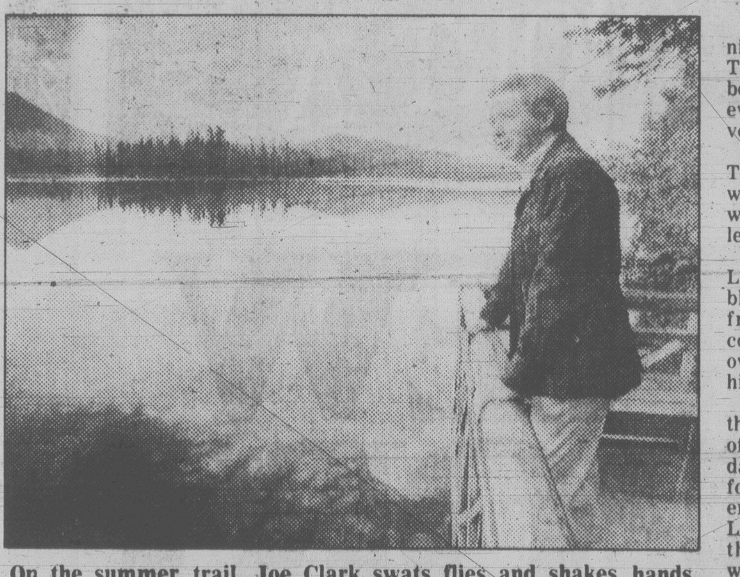
Once and future prime minister

EDMONTON — The advance woman has called ahead and booked a table, but at the Gainford Hotel's restaurant — on the highway between Hinton and Spruce Grove, Alta. — there are no tables the way you think of tables.

There are booths.

They are done in chipped formica, and the minimum charge for sitting at one is 50 cents a person, which is worth it when you consider there is a juke box with personalized volume control in each booth, although some of them are broken.

The floor is gritty, but at least nobody slips coming in out of the rain that has been drubbing down all day. There is a magazine rack at the far end of the restaurant that has a Maclean's from Sept. 24, 1979.



On the summer trail, Joe Clark swats flies and shakes hands.

Family man

In the corner booth sits a middle-aged, pink-faced man, neatly dressed in a beige summer suit, sitting across from his attractive young wife and a blue-eyed, 3½-year-old child, who says this about her father:

"When he comes home from work he runs up to me and picks me up high, and I give him a big hug, because he's been working hard."

He is Joe Clark — "I had the privilege of serving as Canada's once and future prime minister" — and he has now been out of power for 6½ months, which is just about the same length of time he was in it.

The Progressive Conservative party has been grieving since it lost the election, he says, and he is sick of it. The pundits have been saying he'll have to step down as leader, and he is sick of that too. It is his "firm view," he says, "that the party will be absolutely best served by my staying on as leader."

There is a party convention scheduled for February, and one of his aides says he can't afford to have more than 25 per cent of the delegates vote for a leadership race without his image being damaged.

He hasn't thought much about that — only a little more, he guesses, than he's thought about the party's artichoke policy. The main thing is to shake the party out of its grief and get it thinking and performing like an alternative government - "to focus on broader questions than what happened on Dec. 13 (when his government fell in the Commons) and Feb. 18" (when his government fell at the polls) — and he says that has already begun to happen.

He also he wants to get the party, and himself, better known, on the grounds that they are not only a better product than the Liberals are offering, but also know the ropes a lot better than they did when they went underground after winning the 1979 election.

For himself, he says, he is more confident ("I always thought I could do things but now I know I can do them") and more in command ("I was perhaps too deferential to my colleagues, but now I'm clearly in charge, and people like John Crosbie and Flora MacDonald know it, and there's no problem.")

The problem in selling the better product on this tour is the news media has failed to join forces, just as they failed on the previous week's tour, and without them it is just like old-time politics.

Without the multiplier each connection becomes more important — especially in his home riding of Yellowhead, where he says he used to be able communicate more easily on a frank, constituent-to-MP basis before he became a "celebrity" through his short visit to the top.

Sometimes Clark is indeed a celebrity, sometimes a face in the crowd.

He poses for pictures with people who look pleased to have spotted him, flails grain for an amused gallery at the 15th annual Ukrainian Festival in Dauphin, Man., reads the epistle at Lac Ste. Anne shrine outside Alberta Shores, and if you talk to 30 people after they've talked to Clark, 25 will tell you they think Joe's pretty good stuff.

If he has a problem it is that he doesn't leave much of a wake — people who have been chatting nose-to-nose with him one moment, even giving him gifts and asking for his autograph, can sometimes be seen involving themselves in completely different concerns five seconds later.

But sometimes this continuous interplay with strangers simply breaks down.

Coming out of the Gainford Hotel a wild-looking young man wearing tattoos and a delighted grin wants to make contact.

"Where are you from?" says the then-and-future prime minister.

"Edmonton," says the young man.

"Aha," says Clark.

The young man waits for more, but that is the end.

Still, a good trip, for all the rain and no press. No gaffes, for instance. Going into the senior citizens' pancake breakfast at Alberta Sands, Clark's 37-year-old brother, Peter, an assured, relaxed lawyer with an easy sense of humor, who jogs 30 to 40 miles a week and doesn't know how to look awkward, tries to leap a puddle, slips, and falls in.

His elder brother, the politician, skips nimbly across with daughter Catherine in his arms, and even Peter in his wetness seems relieved.

Always present, from one community hall to the next, is Pierre Elliott Trudeau, whom Clark must be seen to be besting — or at least sparring evenly with — by the February con vention.

In the first place Clark isn't sure Trudeau is going — "I will believe it when I see it that Pierre Trudeau wants to retire with his sons to a leisurely life in wealthy Montreal."

But if Trudeau does resign and the Liberals bring in new leadership blood there will be strong pressure from within the Conservatives to counter with something new of their own, unless Clark is somehow riding high.

He feels the potential is there, that the electorate has high expectations of the Liberals that are quickly being dashed, that things are falling apart for Trudeau on the economy, energy and the constitution, that the Liberals are ruining the country and that people are going to see he was right all along, even if it hasn't shown in the polls yet, even if the Liberals never seem to pay for their outrages the way the Tories do.

The problem, he thinks, is that when you have the kind of governing tradition that the Liberals have, your mistakes or deceptions seem like small aspects of your over-all record, whereas there is a perception that a government without experience is likely to be incompetent, and mistakes or deceptions are taken as proof of that.

Power and fun

Clark emphasises that he is no more interested in spending a long time as Opposition leader than was Pierre Trudeau. The trouble with being Opposition leader, he says, is that the role lacks both power and fun. He did a good job as prime minister, he says. He wants to be prime minister again.

The weekend winds up peacefully at a family reunion in the Turner Valley. It has finally stopped raining, and Clark relaxes down by the creek bed, chatting with the younger folk.

Up by the refreshment tent you can hear one of the relatives talking to a long-lost cousin from the States.

"You remember Joe," the voice carries. "The former prime minister."

That would be "once-and-future prime minister," auntie — get on the bandwagon. Focus your mind on governing, never mind the flies and formica, and full steam ahead.

The emperor of Montreal

By DAVID LORD

MONTREAL — Mayor Jean Drapeau, stung, but not bowed, by accusations of incompetence and mismanagement in the Malouf commission's report on the billion-dollar Olympic deficit, has come out fighting against his critics.

The English-language Gazette asked recently if Drapeau was fit to continue in office, given the findings of the inquiry chaired by Quebec Superior Court Justice Albert Malouf.

But La Presse editorialist Ivan Guay wrote a virtual apologia for the mayor, saying that if Drapeau was guilty of a crime it was "a crime of passion," based on a gut-level obsession to buttress the self-confidence of his constituents.

Guay ventured that the mayor remains the most popular politician in Canada because "the French-Canadian masses recognize themselves in him."

"A great politician is nothing more than someone who incarnates the qualities and faults of his fellow citizens. He's not superhuman. He's merely an enlarging mirror. And what's more trustworthy than a mirror? What's more honest? Mr. Drapeau can say he spent the money for the people he loves so well. And the more we love, the greater the excess . . ."

Steady sniping

The $1.6-billion 1976 Summer Olympics left Montrealers with concrete, steel and glass proof of that passion, as well as the $1-billion debt.

The mayor has weatherd criticism before. Steady sniping during the decade leading up to the Olympics couldn't unseat him.

Lately, critics have charged that he has concentrated on prestige projects to the detriment of essentials. The city's financial health has suffered under his rule, they [illegible] little has been done to [illegible] head offices, encourage urban renewal, repair the streets or, ironically, add to recreational facilities other than the monumental Olympic installations.

Since 1954, the 64-year-old lawyer has been absent from city hall for only three years, when Sarto Fournier replaced him for one term.

In 1978, Drapeau won his seventh term, with 61 per cent of the vote in a three-man race. His Civic Party won 55 per cent of the vote and 52 of 54 council seats, despite the fact the Malouf commission, then in the midst of hearings, had already uncovered most of the evidence of mismanagement later documented in its report.

Analyzing Drapeau's success, former opposition city councillor Jean Roy says the pint-sized mayor overwhelms opponents with the force of his personality.

"(Drapeau's) size has little effect on his energy. He's austere, but fanatical when caught up with his projects."

Roy likened the mustachioed, bespectacled Drapeau to an industrious mole, who imposes his values on a weak coterie. "He's a giant alright, but in a context where no one around him dares to assume his responsibilities."

In relations with the provincial and federal governments, "he plays tough and hits hard, using his intelligence and energy."

"He's the one with the most experience, the professional against amateurs, and he always strikes with the same strength. He doesn't give any chances, there are no moments of weakness.

"Drapeau is an emperor, who acts like an emperor," Roy said.

The mayor's old-fashioned French-Canadian nationalism — not to be confused with the newfangled, social democratic brand of Quebecois nationalism advocated by the Parti Quebecois — has also been a valuable asset with his constituents.

Roy views projects such as the Olympic site and the new headquarters for the French-language CBC, both located in the east end of Montreal, and the more central Complexe Desjardins, a multi-towered shopping, hotel and office project, as an attempt to shift the commercial and cultural centre of the city away from the English-speaking west end and into Drapeau country.

That means the mainly French-Canadian middle- and low-income neighborhoods where most of his electoral support comes from.

Montrealers are literally surrounded by concrete examples of Drapeau's vision of his city.

For music lovers — the mayor himself has a penchant for the classics, especially opera — he built Place des Arts for the performing arts.

For baseball fans, he had a hand in bringing the Expos to town, while car-racing fans got the Canadian Grand Prix.

Commuters got an ever-expanding ultra-modern subway system, while the Man and His World summer exhibition on islands in the St. Lawrence River stands as a reminder of the Expo 67 world fair.

This summer, Drapeau offered the city the biggest international flower show ever held in North America — Les Floralies.

The whole package is wrapped round by kilometres of expressways, all built under Drapeau administrations.

Drapeau . . . Canada's most popular politician?

Michael Fainsat, city councillor for the opposition Montreal Citizens' Movement, says "Drapeau represents a messiah figure, a super manipulator, super politician, who seems to exercise mystic power over huge numbers of people who've identified with him and fused their own feelings about the city with those of this God-like figure."

Fainstat noted that the mayor's influence extends well beyond the city's limits because Montreal remains the cultural, economic and social nerve centre of Quebec.

Drapeau's political savvy was apparent when he sidestepped the ticklish problem of personally transferring the Olympic flag to Moscow in light of the Canadian boycott of the 1980 Games.

In a written news release — the standard mode of communication by a man who seldom meets reporters in person and often flatly refuses to answer questions he doesn't like — Drapeau recalled the electric moment when two young athletes carried the Olympic torch into Montreal's glistening new stadium to open the 1976 Games.

Rousing ovation

What could be more fitting, he asked, than to send the same couple to bear the flag to Moscow as Montreal's representatives? Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau embraced the idea as a means of complying with Olympic protocol while avoiding a personal appearance by the mayor or any other Canadian politician.

In the aftermath of the Malouf report, Drapeau has choosen his terrain carefully, attacking the report and the commissioners before the annual meeting of the Montreal Chamber of Commerce — a body laden with hotel operators and other businessmen who profit from the tourist trade generated by such projects as the Olympics.

The mayor got a rousing ovation when he told the chamber that despite the inquiry, "I haven't lost my enthusiasm, and no one's going to succeed in giving me an inferiority complex."

In letters to the editor and on open-line radio shows, Drapeau supporters echoed their mayor, questioning the motives and methods of the inquiry set up by the Parti Quebecois government.

Backers of the mayor attacked the commission as part of an alleged campaign by the PQ to discredit and eventually oust Drapeau — an ironic notion in view of the fact the goverment went out of its way to court the mayor during the recent referendum campaign. Drapeau didn't take a stand either way in the plebiscite.

Fainstat says he was astounded by Drapeau's success at discrediting the Malouf report, sowing the idea that because the inquiry "dared question the omnipotent and infallible mayor, something must be wrong with the system itself."

Meanwhile, the provincial and federal governments have been treating the mayor with kid-gloves. The Quebec government has so far steered clear of criticizing his involvement in the Olympics, despite the Malouf report's conclusions.

And that silence has revived speculation that confronting Drapeau head-on would [illegible] to political suicide for whoever attempted it.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

It's an unsightly mess, but I love it. Grass clippings, tall weeds, straggley shrubs, garden garbage, and general neglect are the components of my favorite corner of the garden. When every other part of the old spread has been abandoned by the birds, the junk corner will produce.

I guess there's a message there. Tidy, well-kept gardens just don't make good habitat for birds; untidy, neglected gardens do.

Whatever, I was down in the garbage corner the other evening when it did produce — and what a production!

Something to do with the garden was occupying my attention when a small, greyish-brown, sparrow-like bird scooted out of a nearby flower bed and dashed into the cover in the corner.

My mind did a quick little check-off. Song Sparrow? No. Too pale. White-crowned Sparrow? Not likely. Too small. Savannah Sparrow? No. Never! Wrong place. Lincoln's Sparrow? I don't know what made me think Lincoln's sparrow — maybe one of those unexplainable hunches. No, I rejected Lincoln's Sparrow too. Wrong time of year; a month from now maybe, but not in July.

Before I could continue my little mental inventory, the bird unexpectedly reappeared. It was a Lincoln's Sparrow!

Now, by any measure of bird migration known for these parts, that Lincoln's Sparrow should not have been in my garden at the tail end of July. On the other hand, by any known measure of visual acuity, that Lincoln's Sparrow was in my garden — and it was the tail end of July.

Of course the fact that Lincoln's Sparrows are not supposed to be in Victoria at this time of year is a nice neat rule made up by birdwatchers for birdwatchers. It's a rule the sparrows themselves know nothing about and therefore break, but it's a rule based on what we know about Lincoln's Sparrows. And, in this case, what we know says that a Lincoln's Sparrow shouldn't have been there.

Later that evening, with chores done, I sat down to consider the implications of the bird in my junk corner. There was really no mystery to it. Lots of migrants, of dozens of kinds, are sneaking through our gardens these days and, except for the occasional low cheep or chip or tsip, their passing might go unnoticed. And there was no good reason — except the record — why one of the migrants couldn't be a Lincoln's Sparrow.

Having duly disposed of the question why, I turned to the question of where. Where had that little fellow come from? More important, where do Lincoln's Sparrows spend their summers? They pass through here in the spring and again in the fall — although usually much later than the little guy in my yard — otherwise Victorians know little about them.

Well, according to the eastern team of Murray and Doris Speirs, who have probably studied these little skulkers more than most, Lincoln's Sparrows — in summer — are birds of second-growth forest or forest edge. They like the bushy growth that springs up after a forest has burned or has been cut. They also like the shrubby growth that springs up along newly-cut roads.

Here in the west they're mostly birds of the mountains, where, given the right habitat, their wren-like songs are a feature of summer. They seldom ever sing on migration.

Roger Tory Peterson describes them as "afraid of their own shadow" and that's the feature of their behavior we know best. If you ever do get to see one, it is usually for a moment as it dashes from one piece of cover to another.

On their wintering grounds, which include northern California, Mexico, and Central America, they are more bold, coming readily to feeders and exposing themselves freely.

But that's in the south. Here, they like tangles such as my junk corner. And, once in such a tangle, it's usually impossible to coax one out. But this one did come out and thereby became the star of this week's story.

My day in court

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Who says the mail never brings any good news? Here, right here, is mail from the New York City judicial system stating that I may be summoned to jury duty any day now. I can hardly wait. At last I am to have the pleasure of sitting in judgment on my peers.

As if this were not enough to fill anybody's cup, the court promises to pay me $12 a day, plus $1.20 for round-trip subway fare to and from the jury box. I am a bit put off by this, for I would gladly serve for nothing and pay for limousine transport to the courthouse in exchange for the chance to send several of my peers away for three to five years.

Yes, I have several in mind, but no names will be mentioned. We don't want to lay the basis for costly appeals right here in print, do we?

What is troubling about the $12-a-day salary is not the suggestion that the New York judicial system is so out of touch with the world that it has never heard of inflation, but the evidence that it regards jury duty as salaried work instead of a pleasurable civic duty. In this light, the $12-a-day figure casts a different light on things.

The obvious implication is that New York City thinks jury duty is such coolie labor that $1.50 an hour is ample compensation. Does anybody else in the city work for $1.50 an hour? Then why is the juror expected to sit conscientiously in judgment for this insulting salary? You can bet judges don't work at these rates. Any lawyer caught working at $1.50 an hour would be disbarred and it wouldn't matter because nobody would want to hire him anyhow.

This salary is bound to have an evil effect on a juror's work. When you are working for $1.50 an hour it can be exasperating to have to listen to a two-hour summation by a lawyer who is making $1,500 an hour.

You are likely to begin despising that lawyer, not to mention his client. You are likely to be too busy listening to your own thoughts to have any time for the lawyer's argument. You are likely to be listening to thoughts like these:

"This bird thinks he can earn $3,000 by punishing me just because my time is worth only $1.50 an hour. If I were getting the $3,000 for listening to him and he were getting the $1.50 per hour, you can bet he would have shut up an hour and a half ago. Well, just wait until we get to the jury room, my fine legal friend, and we will even matters up. You will have a fine time collecting your $3,000 once your client is tucked away for 20 years up at Attica."

This is a poor way to run a system of justice. If jury duty is to be treated as salaried labor, jurors ought to be paid the same salary as the highest-paid lawyer in the courtroom. This will stop jurors from developing animosity toward the lawyers, encourage more thorough presentation of the case and lead to lengthier, more thoughtful deliberations in the jury room.

On the other hand, jury duty can be treated as a civic obligation, like cursing the subway system and booing the mayor on opening day at Yankee Stadium, in which case accepting money would be poor sportsmanship. This is the more sensible approach.

Most people are surely willing to spend some time at the courthouse without pay if they can have the chance to send people to jail and bring in large financial judgments against those utilities that are always raising your rates and then telling you to "have a nice day."

I can well imagine sitting unpaid in a courtroom for several weeks and feeling quite content about it if, at the end of the trial, I could stand up in the jury box and order a certain public utility to pay damages of $500 million and, after hearing the executives scream, say, "Have a nice day."

I don't want to suggest that I would be a bad juror, even if they insist on pinning the dozen-dollar-a-day fee on me. I would never think of convicting any of my peers before listening to the usual farrago of mendacious testimony in their behalf.

I certainly wouldn't dream of bringing in a multimillion-dollar finding against some detestable public utility until its lawyers had finished their devious attempts to distort all the evidence and smear the good name of the poor crippled widow who had brought the suit.

This notice in the mail warns me that unless I acknowledge it within 10 days I will be haled into court and subjected to the rigors of the law. They don't have to threaten me. Back it goes in this afternoon's mail. I can't wait to start loading the trains to Attica and making poor crippled widows very, very happy.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was sharply higher in active mid-afternoon trading today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading in shares of Great Northern Financial Corp. resumed at the opening after being halted late Thursday. By 2 p.m. the stock was up ¾ to $5½.

Great Northern Financial Corp. said it has declared a stock dividend of four Colonial Oil and Gas shares for every 10 shares of Great Northern held.

The company also said one of its two major shareholders, Unicorp Financial Corp. and Betrust Investment Corp. Ltd., will acquire the shareholdings of the other by Aug. 12, subject to the completion of certain conditions.

The exchange also said subdivided common shares of Texaco Canada Ltd. will be posted for trading at the opening Aug. 11, replacing currently listed shares. Shareholders approved a four-for-one stock split July 12.

Vancouver

Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 11 a.m. PDT was 3,204,070 shares.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading among industrials and remained steady at $6.65 on 34,730 shares. Keg Restaurants rose .20 to $3 on 11,700 shares. Renn Industries was unchanged at $1.80 on 3,100 shares and Taro Industries gained a dime to $4.40 on 3,000 shares. Proflex Ltd. was steady at .20 and Canadian Javelin Ltd. dropped a nickel to $1.50.

Damascus Resources warrants led resource traders and remained unchanged at .51 on 83,800 shares. Copper Lake Explorations declined a dime to $3.20 on 46,100 shares. Nuspar Resources was unchanged at .78 on 41,000 shares and Kandahar Resources was down a nickel to $2.95 on 39,500 shares. Charleston Resources Ltd. dropped .01 to .64 and CDR Resources Inc. gained .01 to .70.

Crescent Mines Ltd. led curb exchange traders and dropped a nickel to $1.55 on 700,850 shares. Mackenzie Energy advanced .06 to $1.30 on 63,800 shares, Val d'Or Explorations rose a dime to $2.95 on 53,700 shares and Pilgrim Petroleum declined .15 to $3.55 on 41,900 shares. Interlake Development Corp. rose .11 to $1.07 and Eskimo Resources dropped .01 to $1.03.

New York

The stock market rolled up another strong gain in heavy trading today, picking up where it left off in Thursday's powerful advance.

Analysts said the market's recent gains had created a bandwagon effect, attracting waves of new buyers.

For weeks now, many analysts have been warning that the market was overdue for a downward correction.

But that decline has repeatedly failed to materialize, and traders who had been holding back have rushed to join the party.

Merrill Lynch was actively traded, up ¾ to $30¼ and trading at its highest prices in four years.

Brokerage-house stocks have been on the rise for some time, aided by record trading volume in the stock market and this spring's drop in interest rates.

Among actively traded blue chips, General Motors was up ⅝ to $54⅛ and International Business Machines ⅜ to $66⅛.

London

The London stock market was slightly higher near the close of quiet trading today.

The Financial Times index was up 1.4 to 479.6.

Industrials firmed while banks were lower.

Canadian stocks eased.

Gold

LONDON (AP) — Closing gold prices Friday in U.S. dollars a troy ounce. London 633.00; Paris 634.95; Frankfurt 631.95; Zurich 632.50; Hong Kong 629.37.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. today at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 295 cattle and 41 calves.

Sales consisted of a light supply of slaughter cows and feeder cattle. Trade was dull on slaughter cows. There were too few slaughter steers or heifers to quote. Slaughter cows traded fully steady.

Cows D1-2 $53-56, D3-5 49-53.

Feeder cattle receipts consisted of mainly heavy feeder steers and heifers. Trade was active from a good local demand. Good feeder steers traded $1 higher while good feeder heifers were $2 higher.

There were too few stock calves on offer to quote accurate trends.

Good feeder steers over 800 pounds 76-80.85, common and medium over 600 lbs.

U.S. trade deficit reduced by 28%

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decline in imported oil and precious metals reduced the U.S. trade deficit by 28.6 per cent in the second quarter of 1980, the commerce department reports.

The merchandise trade deficit fell to $7.8 billion, compared with a deficit of $10.9 billion in the first quarter. Imports declined $3.1 billion, or five per cent, to $62.5 billion, while exports held virtually steady, at $54.7 billion.

Exports of U.S. auto parts to Canada dropped $400 million in April, May and June, reflecting the slup in automobile sales.

The figures are on what is known as a balance-of-payments basis and exclude military trade of U.S. defence agencies. Various adjustments are made to reflect timing and values.

Oil imports fell by $600 million in the second quarter, a three-per-cent drop to $21 billion. The decline was due entirely to a 12-per-cent decline in volume, as imports fell to level of 7.44 million barrels a day.

The average price per barrel rose 10 per cent, to $30.86, running the total price increase for the first half of the year to 57 per cent. For the same period, the volume of imported oil fell 10 per cent, to 7.93 million barrels a day.

The value of imported precious metals, principally gold, fell $1 billion in the first quarter, the commerce department said. Imported cars were down slightly but still claimed 28 per cent of the U.S. market, compared with 26 per cent in the first three months of the year.

The stagnant U.S. export picture in the second quarter was due mainly to a decline in shipments of grain and collectors' coins.

Exports of farm products fell seven per cent, or $700 million, to $9.7 billion, mainly due to the cutoff of grain shipments to the Soviet Union because of the Russian invasion of afghanistan.

Cars sell, but slowly

OTTAWA (CP) — Sales of new cars and trucks increased 7.6 per cent in June over May, but were still 22.3 per cent below last June's level, Statistics Canada reports.

A total of 111,875 new vehicles worth $1 billion were sold in Canada in June.

Sales of passenger cars and commercial vehicles produced in Canada and the United States were down more than 25 per cent, but sales of foreign cars were up 9.1 per cent and sales of foreign trucks and buses were up 43.4 per cent.

DO YOU WANT TO BECOME AN INDEPENDENT BUSINESS PERSON IN A BIG PROFIT BUSINESS?

Then you will want to talk to us. Thruway Mufflercentre. The biggest chain of independent muffler specialists in Canada.

When you open a Thruway muffler shop, you own it lock, stock and barrel.

You're an independent, not a franchisee. Which means you're not held down by armfuls of corporate rules and regulations.

What's more, you get all the benefits of a franchise. Like store signage, training, national advertising and exhaust-system marketing data. But you don't get saddled with the one, big problem of a franchise. A franchise fee.

And the parts you stock are quality-manufactured by AP Parts of Canada, the country's largest supplier of exhaust systems.

Want to know more? Write to our Marketing Manager, Ron Grieve, 80 Enterprise Road, Rexdale, Ontario M9W IC6.

We'll give you all the benefits of a big company. And the independence you get when a company's your own.

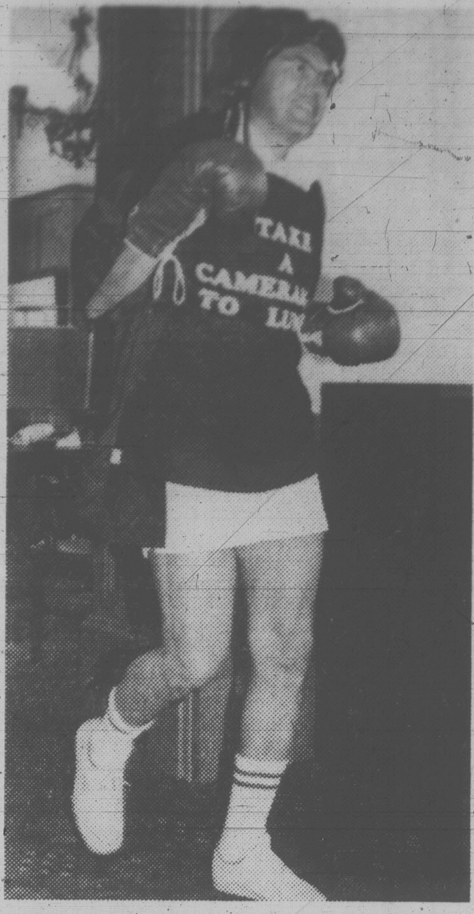
Kid Video ready for battle



TAKE A CAMERAMAN TO LUNCH

Pitter-pat Pat cameraman defender

Muhammad Ali he'll never be, but Communications Minister Pat McGeer is taking up the fight game to protect — of all people — cameramen.

McGeer, who got into a little trouble with a CBC cameraman in Vancouver on Wednesday — film footage shows the cameraman falling to the ground after a hallway encounter with McGeer — strolled into the legislature Thursday in full boxing gear, including gloves, headgear and a T-shirt bearing the phrase: "Take a cameraman to lunch."

"They tell me I float like a bee and sting like a butterfly, but I'll be fighting to protect cameramen," said McGeer, who is also science and universities minister.

McGeer, nicknamed Kid Video by his manager, Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Garde Gardom, was sent from the house by Speaker Walter Davidson, who quipped McGeer wasn't properly attired for that arena.

Asked outside the house about his fighter, Gardom said: "He's a bit overweight and he's not looking too good — I may have to find a new boy."

The incident at University of B.C. on Wednesday followed a news conference called by McGeer to announce a program to study natural gas conversion for automobiles.

McGeer was pursued down a corridor by CBC reporter Larry Rose and cameraman Steve Rendall for questioning on another matter. The film footage showed McGeer spin around suddenly and Rendall apparently falling down, his camera still running.

Rendall bounced up uninjured and photographed Rose attempting to restrain McGeer shouting, "You don't touch a cameraman."

Rose said he had no doubt Rendall was knocked down.

McGeer said he simply raised his hand in front of the lens and "I guess looking through the camera he (Rendall) had difficulty seeing properly and he fell over backwards." The minister later apologized to the crew.

B.C.-Alta. port control bid gets blunt 'No' from Pepin

Provincial control of West Coast ports was rejected Thursday by federal Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin.

The issue is one of the B.C. and Alberta governments' major economic demands for next month's constitutional summit meeting.

The B.C. and Alberta cabinets decided at a joint cabinet meeting here last month that regulatory control of Pacific ports is essential to their future economic well-being.

"It's clear enough that the power to regulate and develop seaports can be handled better by one level of government, which in this case is the federal government," Pepin said in an interview.

Pepin was in Victoria for the opening of a new $10 million Coast Guard base.

Provincial Industry Minister Don Phillips, present with Pepin — they had joined up to make an announcement concerning Nanaimo harbor expansion — bristled at Pepin's response.

"The minister might also agree that in the U.S. and other countries around the world there are cities running port facilities very efficiently," Phillips said, giving New York and Rotterdam as examples.

Pepin responded by saying his arguments were advanced in a Canadian context — a reference to next month's constitutional meeting in Ottawa and the Trudeau government's contention that intra-provincial economic agencies such as the National Harbors Board must remain in federal hands.

Pepin's comment was the first official response to the B.C.-Alberta resolution, which is supported by Saskatchewan government.

Grace can't believe Queen poll

Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy said Thursday she doesn't believe a Gallup Poll that shows 45 per cent of British Columbians are opposed to retaining the Queen as head of state.

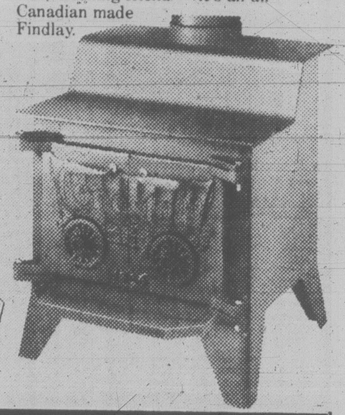
The poll, based on 1,057 personal in-home interviews in July, showed that nationally, 43 per cent were opposed.

"I question the figures and I question the questions that were asked to get that result," Mrs. McCarthy said. "And until that is known, I simply won't believe that figure."

She said British Columbians are probably the greatest supporters of the monarchy of any place in Canada and there should be great emphasis placed at future constitutional talks on retaining the Queen as the head of state.

"I can't think of anything more important than to put the suggestion of retaining the monarchy as the first priority in the constitution."

Mrs. McCarthy also said that she thinks the federal government's plan to spend $6 million on an advertising campaign to publicize the federal point of view in constitutional negotiations "is one of the most appalling suggestions of expenditure of public funds that I have ever heard of."



The Findlay. It's more than a cozy wood burning friend.

It's as dependable as the Conestogo wagon of old but with new ideas. To begin with it's made of heavy steel plate welded into an efficient airtight unit. We lined the inside with fire bricks and then added Thermocord gaskets to the cast iron doors for a positive airtight seal. Then we built in a baffle system for the most efficient burning up to 12 hours. There's a practical ash catch at the front, the doors open wide enough for a 20" log and the 5/16" steel cooktop provides a surface for cooking or warming.

An excellent feature of the Conestogo is that the body of the stove is one piece wrap around body which lessens the chance of weld cracks and air leaks. The decorator, wooden handles, and the cast iron doors are outstanding. The unique Conestogo wagon design is cast in three dimensional detail and the wheels of the wagon are spin type draft controls, which provide for maximum control of the fire for all night burning. The sturdy steel decorator legs add more good looks and, when you open the doors for full enjoyment of the fire, the Conestogo is more than a cheerful wood burning friend — it's an all Canadian made Findlay.

Natural gas cars get $½M boost

VANCOUVER (CP) — Science Minister Pat McGeer has given his campaign for natural gas-powered automobiles another fill-up by announcing a half-million-dollar program to study car-engine fuelling systems.

The one-year project, under supervision of American automotive expert Enoch Durbin, tailgates a just-completed study by B.C. Research of two cars whose fuel systems were converted to use natural gas.

Durbin will work at the University of B.C.

McGeer said even the inferior conversion kits in the B.C. Research experiment resulted in a 60-per-cent fuel savings on the two vehicles.

Wrong virus cloned in lab mixup

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — A prominent scientist working in a high-security laboratory has cloned the wrong virus — the first such violation of federal rules reported — but he said Thursday there was never a health threat.

"It would have been the first time a specific antiviral agent had been produced," said Dr. Samuel Ian Kennedy, the virologist who has been ordered to stop the cloning. "It is important work."

The National Institutes of Health, which laid down the controversial guidelines for cloning and recombinant DNA research, was informed of the mixup by the bio-safety committee of the University of California at San Diego.

Kennedy was seeking agents to combat the virus when he accidentally cloned the semliki virus, which can cause fever and headache, while trying to clone the sindbis virus, a cause of skin rash and fever.

Although Kennedy said "there is no advantage to me to do one virus over the other," he said he discovered the mistake because of confusing results in his laboratory last March. It was only last week, on July 29, that the National Institutes of Health approved the cloning — or genetic copying — of agents such as the one Kennedy inadvertently cloned.

A virus is a submicroscopic bit of living matter that can reproduce only when it invades a bacteria or living cell. Cloning is a process in which genetic material, from a virus in this case, is transferred into a bacteria to be copied endlessly. Each copy is called a clone.

Kennedy, a 37-year-old expert on rare insect viruses, said the cloned material is in storage pending investigations.

A university's spokesman, biologist Peter Geiduschek, agreed that nobody was endangered in Kennedy's research but said the cloning work has been temporarily halted.

But biologist Robert Sinsheimer, chancellor of the University of California at Santa Cruz, said the mixup "illustrates one of the kinds of concerns people have had — that scientists do make mistakes and accidents do happen."

Sindbis, which is carried by mosquitos in parts of Africa, India and Australia, is listed by the U.S. Centre for Disease Control as a Class 2 agent along with rubella and polio viruses.

Semliki, which is found largely in Uganda, is listed in the more dangerous Class 3 with yellow fever and smallpox. Kennedy did his work in a top-security P-3 laboratory with high containment features that make it suitable for cloning Class 3 agents under U.S. government regulations.

Kennedy joined the San Diego faculty three years ago after eight years at the University of Warwick in Coventry, England. He has earned degrees at the University of Glascow, Scotland and the University of Reading in England and has been awarded the Biochemistry Medal of the Glasgow university and the Fleming Medal in 1978 by England's Society for Microbiology.

Narcotic thieves hit second store

Hundreds of tablets and vials of narcotic drugs were stolen early today in a break-in at Oak Bay United Pharmacy, 2200 Oak Bay Avenue.

It was the second drug store hit by thieves in Greater Victoria in the past week.

An Oak Bay police spokesman said a nearby resident was awakened about 2:45 a.m. by the sound of breaking glass. Moments later he saw three persons leave the scene in an older model car.

Police found the front window smashed and a locked cabinet in the dispensary rifled of a wide assortment of drugs including demerol, cocaine, morphine powder and narcotic-based cough medicine.

Painkiller or simply a pain?

In the U.S., where DMSO is recognized only in Oregon and Florida, the Food and Drug Administration is investigating it and the claims being made for it.

But two Britons, who are taking part in a scientific meeting at the University of Victoria, said they are unaware of either the chemical's prescribed use or any investigative work in the U.K. on its potential as a pain killer or for other pharmaceutical purposes.

Dr. D.E. Pegg, a cryobiologist in the department of surgery and immunology at Cambridge University, said said DMSO is present in minute quantities in certain injections of preserved cells.

"In my own opinion," Pegg said, "I don't think there is any substantial evidence that DMSO is harmful, but it would need a great deal of study."

He said before DMSO could be generally approved for medical purposes such as a liniment, acceptable levels of tolerance would have to be determined.

Pegg's work with DMSO is in a laboratory context, where it is used as a cryoprotectant, a kind of antifreeze for cells and blood during low temperature cell investigation.

A colleague, Dr. Helen le B. Skaer, of the zoology department at Cambridge, said DMSO is a common agent in the laboratory for freeze-storage of blood and tissue.

It is harmless in these applications and it can be removed before cells are implanted, she said.

Actors plan to step up picketing

HOLLYWOOD (LAT) — Accelerating their tactics gainst the major film and television producers, striking actors plan to picket Universal Studios on a daily basis beginning Monday.

The Screen Actors Guild, in a letter sent to its 45,000 members Thursday, also clamped down on publicity and promotion by actors of feature films and television shows completed before the advent of the strike 17 days ago.

Participants applaud as bus rider Dalglish hits finish line

Great Summertime Transportation Tilt shows two-wheels are the niftiest at out-smarting rush-hour traffic

Never bet your last dime against a penny farthing

Duclos flat on back at end of race has Minvielle worried

By PAUL MINVIELLE

If you live somewhere in Saanich near the Town and Country shopping centre and work in the depths of darkest downtown, what's your best bet for commuting during the morning rush hour?

What's the fastest way downtown? The cheapest? Most efficient? Least polluting? Most healthful?

It was when someone was considering these weighty questions that the Great Times Summertime Transportation Tournament was born.

Not only would it answer the question, it would also be a good excuse for some employees to stay outdoors for a while on a gorgeous summer morning.

That morning dawned on Thursday and at precisely 8 a.m., with a completely unfair and unexpected start, the three-mile race was on.

The participants were a motley group.

— Reporter Brenda Dalglish riding the Urban Transit Authority.

— Editor Barbara McLintock in a 1974 six-cylinder Dodge Dart, driven sedately and strictly according to the book.

— Brian Scharbach from the composing room on his Honda 750 cc. automatic motorcycle, driven crisply but legally. (Well, almost legally. Read on.)

— Danny Taylor and Ken Fawks, both of High Rollers at 255 Menzies and experienced roller skaters, moving as fast as they could.

— City hall reporter Norman Gidney on his bicycle, doing his very best.

— Ken Duclos, who manages Mr. Mike's near Stadacona Park when he isn't racing his penny farthing bike.

— Bob Beard from the composing room, a runner who looked on the three-mile jaunt as an inadequate morning workout.

— Reporter Paul Minvielle driving a 1965 Sunbeam Minx (what his coworkers sneeringly call the "Goatmobile") with little regard for the humdrum rules of the road.

The guy with the rubber-shod horse didn't show.

Once photographer Bill Halkett had his snapshots, he took off in advance to record the arrival times on Government Street alongside the Legislative Buildings.

Minvielle, the organizer of the whole mess, gave no warning of the impending 8 a.m. start.

Screaming "GO," he took off, straight for the Blanshard Street exit from the T&C lot — the one with the "Do Not Enter" sign.

She later recorded her enjoyment watching Duclos on his penny farthing cut off Scharbach and his motorcycle as they headed down Oak Street.

Duclos is an experienced racer and a keen competitor, but Scharbach soon shook himself loose and scooted into the lead.

He shifted over to Blanshard and the Goatmobile passed him somewhere north of Hillside. But around Pandora the Goatmobile slid into a mini-traffic jam. Scharbach slipped through a hole fit only for a motorcycle and was gone.

His time? Seven minutes, 5 seconds. (We'll ignore that illegal left turn around an island Scharbach inadvertently confessed to as he described his trip, but if we were to do it all over again, the Goatmobile would be a shoo-in winner.)

Almost at this precise moment, Dalglish was boarding a bus back at the starting point.

The goatmobile was lucky, nipping through a couple of amber lights but hitting mostly green lights. Its time was 7 minutes, 14 seconds.

Then, a surprise! The penny farthing rolled into the finish at 10 minutes even.

Gidney, heeding the call to come forth, did. He lurched across the line on his bike in 12 minutes, 10 seconds for fourth place.

He was inordinately proud of the fact he'd beaten both roller skaters.

McLintock sedately parked her vehicle at 12 minutes, 24 seconds.

Roller skater Danny Taylor, who stuck mostly to the road, came in at 13 minutes, 10 seconds.

His partner, Ken Fawks, who used sidewalks as much as he could, took 15 minutes, 20 seconds.

Incredibly (it seemed incredible to the non-runners, anyway) Beard jogged briskly across the finish in 16 minutes, 40 seconds.

Where was Brenda? Coffee was brought and everyone waited.

Suddenly, there she was, walking!

As she passed the bus stop nearest the finish line, the bus she'd mistakenly left one stop too soon pulled up.

So her time of 22 minutes, 31 seconds was as it should have been. And don't forget, that includes the seven-minute wait.

So what did it all prove?

For one thing it proved that motorcycles and bicycles (penny farthing and five-speed) are probably most efficient at slipping through morning traffic.

They're also economical.

Roller skates are pretty good but probably a bit more difficult to master.

And while they don't have brakes, once you're experienced you can stop quickly.

Running is okay if you're into that sort of thing, but it's a little extreme for some of us heavies.

The bus is all right if you're into sightseeing. It's more expensive than riding a bike, but you're more likely to have your bike stolen than your bus hijacked.

The tournament also proved in what incredibly good shape some people are, notably Beard and Duclos.

And Dalglish pointed out a big advantage to the bus.

"Everyone around me was reading," she said.

She noted that one businessman who had been reading got off a stop before she did.

As he prepared to disembark, he opened his attache case and put in his book.

Except for the book, the case was empty.

TOWN TALK

Ald. Ron McKenzie last week published a helpful little booklet called Contact with phone numbers and names of officials to call at city hall for everything from hauling away dead animals to weed inspection. It's free for the asking.

But make sure you have the revised edition before you start phoning.

McKenzie is a little red-faced this week about the large number of typos and mistakes in the booklet. He said the printers didn't proofread the first few hundred and there are some wrong phone numbers.

Call home care services listed on the last page with other emergency numbers, and the people who answer at Burrard-Yarrows shipyard may wonder why you're calling them about help for Grannie.

There's one digit wrong in the number for Hartland Road dump. The residents of a quiet dead-end street in Colwood will be puzzled when you ask when the dump opens.

McKenzie even got his own city hall number wrong, along with most of the other aldermen. His is local 220, not 216, which is Ald. John Cooper's.

Bravery and good seamanship were rewarded Thursday when Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin officially opened the Canadian Coast Guard Base on Dallas Road.

He presented awards to the captain and crew of the fishery patrol vessel Laurier and to David Hegstrom, officer-in-charge of the Bamfield lifeboat station.

Laurier personnel receiving awards were her master, Capt. John Gosse; first officer M.F. Galley, second officer J.K. Wilcox, seamen P.W. Allen, L.J. Whyte, B.J. Heugh and K. Keith, chief engineer T.H. Grondin, second engineer K. Lind, oiler B.N. Heesterman, cook S. Desmond and steward D.G. Nelson.

The awards recognized the efforts of the Laurier and Hegstrom on Oct. 25, 1979, when they rescued David McLellan and Jinx Barber from the fishing vessel Daleson that was foundering in Pachena Bay. Southeasterly winds were gusting to 60 knots at the time, whipping the seas up to 35 feet.

Hegstrom went aboard the Laurier to supply local knowledge.

An award of $425 for excellence was also received by lightstation keeper Don DeRousie, now stationed at Carmanah Point.

Paul Minvielle, one of 21 reporters or copy editors laid off with the merger of the Victoria Times and Daily Colonist, was asked by CHEK-TV if he would be interviewed about his plans.

He agreed and Thursday evening, lined up his kids and a couple of neighbor kids in front of the TV set.

Sure enough. Minvielle's face and voice came through the tube. What a thrill. Then the name flashed, those bold letters that let everybody know whose face they're watching.

RAY MINVIE.

There was a moment's shocked silence then one of the Minvielle kids asked: "Who's Ray Minvie, Dad?"

Minvielle would just like the reporter involved — Patsy Pitz (Yeah, we know it's Pitts) to be a little more careful with his name.

Minvielle, by the way, plans to get down to some serious farming on his Salt Spring Island property. His byline also will be popping up on freelance stories.

The Capital Regional District has finally found a way to earn money rather than spend it.

The source of revenue are the weeds which the CRD's machine removes from the surface of Elk and Beaver lakes.

For $10, a load of eight to 10 cubic yards will be delivered if residents live within a 10-mile radius of the lakes.

The weeds decompose quickly and are said to be ideal as a soil conditioner or a mulch.

One or more loads can be ordered by phoning the CRD's parks division at 478-3344.

The Urban Transit Authority has agreed to stop demanding that a large red F be stamped on monthly bus passes sold to female students attending Camosun College.

Principal Lloyd Morin said the practice, aimed apparently at reducing passes being transfered from one person to another, was discriminatory and asked the UTA to reconsider.

The transit authority did. The college isn't required to stamp women's passes any longer. But, the UTA decreed from now on the college will have to stamp a large red M on passes sold to males.

So much for trying to stamp out red tape in the bureaucracy.

Take heart, all occasional bus riders who are totally confused by the recent changeover of the transit system — and who might even use the municipally-funded system more if they only knew the schedules!

There is now an information line . . . call 384-3224.

Schedules for the three main service areas in Greater Victoria (the city, the western community and the Saanich Peninsula) are also available on any city bus and from the transit office in the Capital Regional District at 524 Yates.

'Disaster' ahead for centre

The convention centre is heading for disaster because key participants aren't being kept informed of planning changes, Ald. Ron McKenzie said Thursday.

The downtown economic development committee of council which he chairs voted to ask for a meeting next Friday with the Provincial Capital Commission to find out what's happening.

McKenzie, Ald. Frank Carson and Gretchen Brewin and city manager Jim Bramley will meet PCC chief executive officer George Giles to be brought up to date on financing, the management structure and related planning.

"The convention centre is headed for disaster because the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing," said McKenzie.

"We want to be kept informed all along. I think we have a right to," said Brewin.

At the moment, revised plans of the $8 million centre are working their way through the city's planning department and advisory design panel.

A special joint meeting of council's two main committees is scheduled for Aug. 19 to view them and debate the PCC's application for a development permit to build on the Reid site at Wharf and Fort.

Challinor questions work split on ships

A local shipyard official is dubious about Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne's promise that $186 million to be spent on upgrading 16 of the navy's aging destroyers will be divided equally between western and eastern yards.

Don Challinor, manager of Yarrows, said the ecomomic impact here will not be known until it is revealed how much work will be done in the federal government dockyard at CFB Esquimalt and how much in commercial yards like his.

Challinor said West Coast shipyards would like to see the upgrading program done in the same manner as in the east. He said the naval work there is carried out in commercial shipyards, mainly at Vickers on the St. Lawrence River.

If the same policy was followed in the west, he said shipyards would be able to develop and maintain the expertise to attract more foreign business. It would also develop more stability in the industry.

Lamontagne said the upgrading program is expected to start in September or October.

He estimated the Destroyer Life Extension Program (DELEX) will provide five million person-hours of direct labor.

He made the announcement aboard HMCS Gatineau, one of the first ships to be upgraded.

Another Esquimalt-based destroyer, HMCS Qu'Appelle, also is slated for upgrading in the first part of the program.

Lamontagne said the upgrading is necessary to keep the ships operational until they can be replaced.

He said the major refits will extend their life expectancy from 20 to 25 years — most of the destroyers are rapidly approaching that — to 35 or 38 years.

In the first phase, 10 of the destroyers will have equipment replaced at a total cost of $107 million.

The second phase calls for inspection and repair of the 16 ships' hulls and propulsion machinery, plus replacement of navigation and life support systems, at an additional cost of $79 million.

Other west coast destroyers to be upgraded are HMCS Mackenzie, HMCS Yukon, HMCS Saskatchewan, HMCS Restigouche, HMCS Kootenay and HMCS Terra Nova.

Spray under suspicion

A herbicide termed safe in May but now under suspicion because of some falsified tests by a U.S. laboratory has been used extensively along the Esquimalt and Nanaimo right-of-way this year without a public hearing.

Some 900 pounds of Roundup (a trade name for the herbicide glyphosate) were slated for spraying along the E & N line this year.

Any public notice of the matter was deemed unnecessary because an environmental ministry spokesman said in May the substance wasn't harmful except to plants.

"Its toxicity is just about zip . . . unless you're a plant," assistant deputy environment minister Allan Murray said.

United Native Nations (UNN) representative Wayne Edwards is among the many who live along the rail line and who were angry about the decision to bypass a public hearing.

Edwards said Indians were surprised to hear about the change in the regulations which allowed the CPR to proceed with spraying without a public hearing.

Edwards' call for a moratorium on spraying until the various chemicals are proved safe won backing at the recent UNN convention in Kamloops.

Roundup is one of several chemicals tested by Industrial Biotest Laboratories in Illinois.

The firm was charged by U.S. officials three years ago with faking results on some tests.

Those results were used to register many chemicals.

'Don't give up. . . ' says MD who saved frigid 7

A man whose techniques have revived near-frozen, apparently dead persons is rewriting the book on hypothermia.

Dr. G.K. Bristow, head of emergency medicine at Winnipeg's Health Sciences Centre, said in Victoria Wednesday intensive body rewarming procedures have been effective in treating seven accidental hypothermia cases at his hospital, including three patients whose hearts amd lungs had stopped pumping.

Bristow said it is no longer a case of giving up on a victim when he is cold — the traditional view of a dead body and one of the clinical factors in determining death.

"Rather it's don't give up until he is warm."

Some cases may take hours of warming to raise body core temperature to a normal range, during which time resuscitation should be carried on unabated, the 41-year-old anesthetist said.

"I don't think there is any excuse, especially in an urban hospital setting, where a person is clinically dead, for not using CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation)."

The effort is sometimes difficult to co-ordinate while core-warming is in process, but Bristow said one physician can supervise both operations, assisted by 10 or 11 paramedics, nurses or trained technicians.

Bristow was interviewed at the University of Victoria after giving a presentation on core warming by peritoneal lavage — irrigating the abdominal cavity with a warm fluid.

The relatively new technique is one of the fastest methods of restoring body temperature to the heart and other vital organs after a person has collapsed from exposure in subfreezing weather or cold water immersion.

The Manitoba doctor described the procedure at a seminar on accidental hypothermia, part of the 17th annual meeting of the Society for Cryobiology, attended by 150 delegates from Canada, the U.S., U.K., Germany, Japan, France and Norway.

Bristow said he performed his first peritoneal irrigation in 1977 on Jean Jawbone, a young Eskimo woman discovered lying outdoors at -25 degrees C.

She was frostbitten and Bristow estimated her heart had been stopped for 30 minutes before medical help arrived.

Her case gained international attention when she not only revived, but apparently suffered no lasting effects and still lives in the Winnipeg area.

Peritoneal lavage has since been used by Bristow seven times in hypothermia treatment.

In only one case, did a patient fail to respond and die and there were other medical complications in that case.

The core warming technique has the advantage of being easy, uses accessible equipment, prevents an afterdrop of core temperature and allows a rapid rise of temperature, usually within an hour of commencement, Bristow said.

All hypothermia victims who are apparently dead by clinical definition should be given core warming and CPR, unless there are obviously fatal signs such as core temperature below 20 degrees C. or rigidly frozen limbs, and chest, Bristow said.

Bristow said it is unfortunate that the practical work in treating accidental hypothermia cases in Winnipeg is so far removed from the research work being done on accidental immersion in cold water by UVic biologists.

UVic's research has been guided by Dr. John Hayward, who has developed some practical methods for treatment and prevention of hypothermia.

In a separate presentation to the seminar, Hayward described methods of monitorng body heat and preventing afterdrop in core temperature once a person has been rescued.

Often a victim's temperature may be near normal, he is breathing and his heart is beating. But when he is picked up his temperature continues to fall.

Hayward said getting the person to full hospital facilities may take two hours, in which core temperature may drop to 30 degrees.

Applying insulating blankets is only a first step. Inhalation rewarming by warm water vapor is a more dirct method and warm bath immersion is the fastest rate of rewarming, Hayward said.

BCR 'discourages' passenger traffic

The B.C. Railway is discouraging people from using its passenger service because the Crown railway loses about $1 million a year on the service.

"We're discouraging it because it provides no positive revenues for the railway," chairman Norman Hyland told a meeting of the legislature's Crown corporations committee Thursday.

He said the railway is cutting down passenger traffic by not advertising.

BCR gets most of its revenues from transporting forest products.

Hyland was unenthusiastic about suggestions by Socred MLA Peter Hyndman that the railway expand its passenger service between North Vancouver and Whistler Mountain and develop a service on Vancouver Island and the Fraser Valley.

Before the judge

A 24-year-old Esquimalt man was jailed for 20 days after he pleaded guilty in provincial court Thursday to carrying a concealed weapon.

David Watt met his girl-friend on July 14 after breaking up the previous day. They quarrelled and the woman taunted Watt by asking if he was going to pull his knife.

Watt did, and the woman received minor injuries to her throat.

Judge William Ostler was told Watt had not intended to harm the woman.

The judge noted the injuries were miminal but could have been more substantial.

He said there are too many incidents of people carrying knives.

A 26-year-old city man will be in jail a little longer.

David McCaskill was attending an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting May 30 in the custody of a staff member from William Head Prison.

McCaskill excused himself to go to the washroom and subsequently walked away. In the following days, he unsuccessfully tried to reach his common-law wife and daughter in Prince Rupert but eventually returned to Victoria and turned himself in.

He was serving a three-year sentence for robbery imposed in November.

Ostler sentenced him to five additional months after he pleaded guilty to escaping lawful custody.

Ronald West, 17, whose lawyer said is fascinated by vehicles, was jailed six months after pleading guilty to possession of a stolen car.

Ostler ruled the time should be served concurrently to a nine-month sentence West is serving for a May car theft.

Doreen Greenhorn, 20, of 3341 Shelbourne, was fined $100 for stealing money from the purse of an 87-year-old woman in whose house she was working.

Ostler termed the theft a breach of trust made particularly reprehensible by the age of the victim.

He was told the accused has repaid $12.

David Carter, 20, of 1019 Pemberton, was sentenced to 15 days in jail after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

He had a similar conviction three years ago.

Other drinking-driving convictions: James Grant, 42, of 917 Bewdley, $450; Terry Sayers, 30, of 2530 Mount Newton, $450; Roy Smith, 55, of 2771 Lakehurst, $350.

Man fined $200 for liquor theft

Wayne Richard Krimmer, 24, was fined $200 in county court Thursday for a break-in and theft of liquor at the Colony Motor Inn on Oct. 15.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart agreed Krimmer was not really starting out on a life of crime.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said he was impressed by Krimmer and suspected he would not be in trouble again.

Defence counsel David Lisson said the liquor was recovered.

Saanich rejects ad-laden shelters

Free bus shelters plastered with local advertising will not be part of the Saanich landscape — not right now, aldermen have decided.

They rejected an offer by Seaboard Advertising Co. of Vancouver to install the shelters in commercial areas of the municipality in return for advertising privileges.

Council will watch developments in Esquimalt where the council is negotiating with Seaboard to install the shelters.

Residents warned a council standing committee last week the bus shelters are little more than billboards and would do little to keep out rain and wind.

Company spokesman Bob Sinclair said last week the bus shelters have been installed in seven municipalities in Greater Vancouver where local merchants buy four-by-six foot panels for $150 a month.

Oak Bay asked to hear tenders

Oak Bay council has been invited to a meeting of the Capital Regional District's solid waste management and sewage disposal committee at 3 p.m. Aug. 19 to consider tenders for the proposed McMicking Point outfall installation.

The Corporation of the District of Saanich

NOTICE

The Corporation of the District of Saanich hereby gives notice of its intention to adopt a by-law, pursuant to Section 574 of the Municipal Act. R.S.B.C. 1979 cap. 290, to authorize the disposal of a portion of the northwest corner of McKenzie Avenue at Finnerty Road (985.7 square metres) and a portion of the southwest corner of Finnerty Road at Sinclair Road (3,302 square metres).

A BY-LAW TO EXCHANGE PROPERTY AT THE McKENZIE AVENUE, FINNERTY ROAD AND SINCLAIR ROAD INTERSECTION.

Copies of the proposed by-law, together with a survey plan showing the lands to be exchanged are on file in the office of the Municipal Clerk in the Municipal Hall, 770 Vernon Avenue, Victoria, B.C., and are available for perusal by any person during the hours of 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. from Monday to Friday except Statutory Holidays.

Chuck Klein of Baker Bowl

NEW YORK — Ted Williams has mellowed but not, it is gratifying to note, to the point of going overripe and gooey. Accepting induction into the Baseball Hall of Fame for his late employer, Tom Yawkey, Theodore Samuel couldn't resist the temptation last weekend to sink a small barb into his old sparmates of the press. "You," he told Duke Snider, another inductee, "are the perfect example of what I always said about the writers. They don't always know everything they think they know. They were 10 years late in getting you here."

As he sometimes was in his spats with the literary set during his playing days, Ted was dead right. Mickey Mantle and Willie Mays were elected to the Cooperstown shrine the first year they were eligible. Duke, their peer in the days when New York had three teams, should have been canonized in 1970 but the voting members of the Baseball Writers' Association dithered bewilderingly.

Still, how about Chuck Klein, whom the veterans' committee chose along with Yawkey? Here is a guy who batted .320 over 17 years with 300 home runs and 1,201 runs batted in, and they kept him waiting for 30 years.

Like most players who enjoyed tenure, Chuck compiled figures as a rookie and as a declining veteran that dimmed his lifetime averages. Rank him over 10 consecutive seasons from 1929 through 1938, and he shows a batting average of .334, with averages of 27 home runs, 104 runs scored and 107 runs batted in. There were individual seasons he enjoyed thoroughly, like 1930 when he batted .386 and knocked in 170 runs but didn't lead the league in either category because Bill Terry hit .401 and Hack Wilson drove home 190 runs.

Chuck wasn't a big man as athletes go, but he knew how to use his muscles. A trim 185 pounds on a 6-foot chassis, he had yellow hair, pale blue eyes, freckles, and a lazily lovely left-handed swing. There is no truth to the story that Philadelphia newspapers kept a headline standing in type: "Klein Hits 3 As Phillies Lose." Chuck never hit three home runs in a game but on July 10, 1936, he hit four. Chances are the Phils lost that day, too.

The rap against Klein, and probably the obstacle that delayed him on the road to Cooperstown, was the fact that he had his best years in a memorable house of horrors named Baker Bowl. It was felt that Lady Godiva could hit .334 with 27 home runs in that chummy playground, with or without spikes. It might be exaggerating to say that the outfield walls cast a shadow across the infield, but if the right-fielder had eaten onions at lunch, the second baseman knew it.

The towering right-field wall was given over entirely to a bright orange sign announcing that the Phillies used Lifebuoy soap which in those days advertised its deodorizing properties. "And they still stink," proper Philadelphians said indulgently. A wire fence screened off the bleachers in left-field where several hundred gamblers sat every day. Under a big sign reading "No Betting," they bet on the game in front of them, other games around the majors and the individual performances of hitters and pitchers. How they survived a season was a mystery, for the same faces were there day in and day out with never any evidence of fresh money.

The press box was a deep, narrow section of the upper deck directly behind home plate. Though it was fenced off from the public seats, hundreds of customers crowded into the little space one day when a wild electrical storm roared in on gale winds. Being in the middle of the roofed grandstand, the press box was least exposed to the horizontal sheets of rain, but just staying comparatively dry was no bargain. The wind found fingerholds in the eaves and around girders and shook down a Niagara of rust, dust and the accumulated grime of decades to coat the clientele with a film of filth.

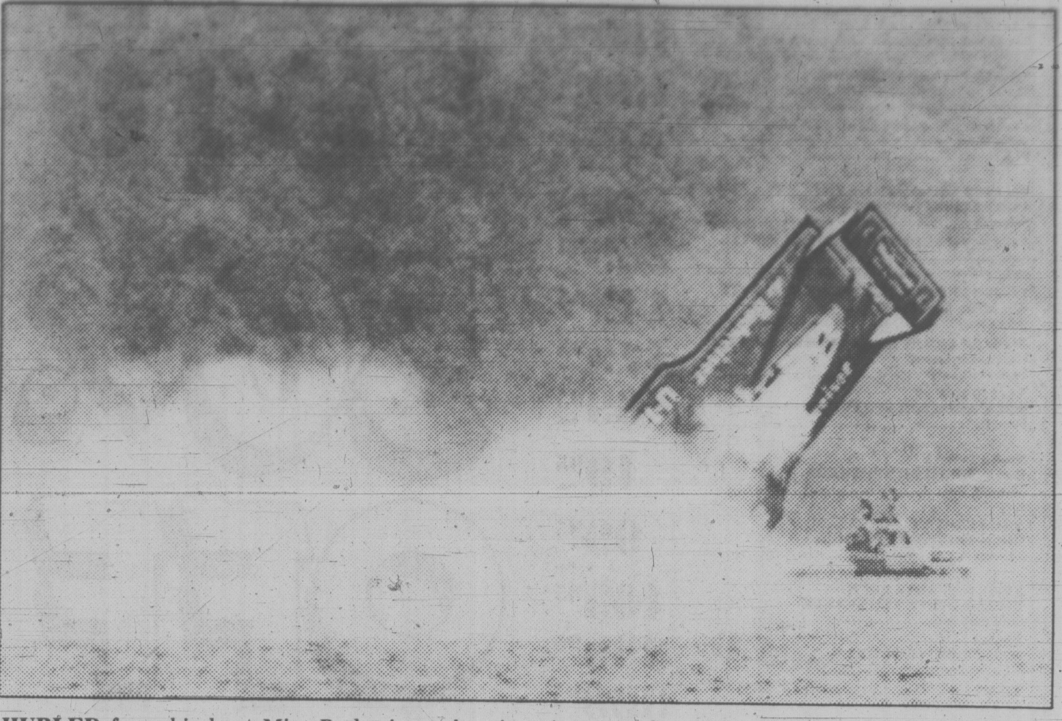
When Jim Brosnan was pitching for the Cincinnati Reds in old Crosley Field he remarked that it was such a small park a pitcher couldn't afford to make a mistake. "As a matter of fact," he said, "it's a small town. You can't afford ANY mistakes."

That was doubly true of Baker Bowl, where it was a joy to watch a master like Dizzy Dean, Jess Haines or Guy Bush work. On other occasions, though, the entertainment often tended to drag. Then inmates of the press box would improve the shining hours by throwing peanuts at the large, bushy head of Stan Baumgartner of the Inquirer, who always sat in the front row. Stan's sconce was an inviting target and his patience great.

One day when the Cubs were in town the peanut supply ran out. Maybe somebody ate them. Authors took to throwing water in Lily cups. It leaked through the floorboards and dripped on the seats in the lower deck. In those days you could sweep the stands with a firehose and raise no protest but this day Gerry Nugent, owner of the Phils, arrived to deliver stern reproof.

"After all," he said, "we have clients downstairs."

"Gad!" said Warren Brown of Chicago. "What a story!"



HURLED from his boat Miss Budweiser when it flipped on Lake Washington while preparing Thursday for this weekend's Seattle Seafair race, Dean Chenoweth fractured his right shoulder and several ribs and is in hospital listed in satisfactory condition. It's the second crash in the same year for Chenoweth's unlimited hydroplane which overturned last summer also on Lake Washington, injuring the driver while he was attempting to set world straightaway record.

Hounds and Hares coming to Royal Victoria marathon

Organizers of the Royal Victoria Marathon were shooting for a modest event when they planned the first of what is expected to a series of annual races, hoping to avoid the possible problems of getting too big too quickly.

They were aiming at a field of no more than 1,000 contestants, most of them recreational and fitness runners who would be concerned mainly with just finishing the Sept. 20 race, several who are capable of covering the 26 miles, 385 yards in well under three hours and a few of international class, able to finish in less than two hours, 35 minutes.

Because it is the first time for the Royal-Vic blister-raiser, the planners doubted that they would get more than a smattering of athletes from areas beyond the Pacific Northwest and Alberta.

Well, they may still wind up with less than 1,000 runners, although that now appears doubtful, but they are going to get some from distant places, if requests for information and entry forms are accurate indications.

Among those from far-away shores are certain to be some British entrants who belong to the world's oldest cross-country running club. Four members of the Thames Hare and Hounds Cross Country Club, which was formed in 1868 and still retains its royal charter to "drop paper", will be among those entered in the marathon, planning to cover the scenic course wearing Victorian costumes.

Requests for information also indicate entries from Japan and many areas of the United States will be in the box when entries close on Sept. 1, many opf them from top-flight runners.

To assist Victoria-area enthusiasts who intend to join the marathon field, entry forms are now available and may be deposited, along with the $6 entry fee, at the sporting goods department at The Bay.

Marathon committee chairman Peter Wheaton says that at the rate entries and now being received, about 40 per cent of the runners will be from outside the Victoria area. Most of the ou-of-towners will arrive the day before the race, in time for the race-eve "carbo-hydrate loading party".

The reasoning, or excuse, for athletes attending to tradition ceremony to consume vast amounts of spaghetti and beer is that this "magical formula" will enhance their performances on race day.

Morgan shares Saskatchewan Open lead

Stadler sees an omen

Times News Services

Craig Stadler, despite what he described as an erratic day, believes he is in fine position to capture the 62nd Professional Golfers' Association title.

"I've only shot under par four times on a Thursday and I either won or finished high," said Stadler who had a 34-33 — 67 opening round Thursday, over the 6,964-yard, par-70 Oak Hill Country Club course in Rochester, N.Y. "That sort of pumps me up. I'm looking forward to tomorrow."

Stadler, 27, a five-year touring pro who has won the Bob Hope and the Greensboro tournaments, said he was fortunate because he had to scramble to have pars Thursday.

But, he added, every time he made a shot to get the par, he came right back with a birdie on the following hole which enabled him to take a one-stroke lead over a group of five — Howard Twitty, Bobby Walzel, Curtis Strange, Gil Morgan and Bob Murphy.

'I didn't play real well at times but then I play awfully good at times,'' said Stadler a winner of $183,297 this year, good enough for fourth place on the money list. "Every time I made a bad shot, I made a good shot to save par."

Favorites Tom Watson and Lee Trevino came in at 75 and 74, respectively, while Jack Nicklaus, another considered in the class of the field, shot even par 70.

In all, 19 players in the field of 150 shot par or better.

Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., was 11 shots back after a round of 78.

Gusty winds and soggy greens didn't stop John Morgan of Victoria from taking a one-third share of the lead after the first round of the $15,250 Saskatchewan Open at Saskatoon.

Morgan shared top spot with Paul Kennedy of Brampton, Ont., and Jerry Anderson of Toronto. All fired four-under-par 68s.

The poor conditions, the result of two straight days of rain, kept scores unusually high, Morgan said.

"The greens were soggy, bumpy and really slow. But I just played steady golf and didn't make any big mistakes."

Rookie Jean-Louis Lamarre, 20, of Sault Ste. Louis, Que., was at two-under-par 70, along with Jim Rutledge of Victoria.

After the first three holes, Pat Bradley figured she was going to be in for a long afternoon in Toronto.

Bradley opened the $150,000 Peter Jackson tournament by bogeying the first hole with a three-putt green. After missing the next two greens in regulation she salvaged par through some good chipping.

Bradley regrouped in a hurry and by the end of the day she held a three-shot lead over the women's field with a dazzling eight-under-par 65.

"Kathy Whitworth was six under before I even got to the first tee and after the first three holes I think she had gone seven under," said Bradley. "I knew I had my work cut out for me."

Whitworth finished second at 68, one shot ahead of Janet Coles, Donna Horton White, Jane Blalock and Beth David.

There was disappointment in the Canadian contingent with the exception of the round by Judy Ellis of Waterloo, Ont.

Ellis, the Ontario amateur champion, shot 73, two strokes better than Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., and Brenda Lunsford of Winnipeg.

Stacey West of Thornhill, Ont., shot 77, while Barbara Bunkowsky of Campbellville, Ont., shot 79. Marlene Streit of Stouffville, Ont., and Michele Guibault of Point-Claire, Que., had 81s and Denise Lavigne of Verdun, Que., 82.

Weekend in sports

Playoff is the key word for Greater Victoria sports fans thinking of doing a little watching during the first half of this weekend.

The Budgets are involved in the Pacific Northwest softball playoffs, the B.C. Senior "B" Women's softball championships are on here and the Shamrocks are at home in the Western Lacrosse Association playdowns. As well, there is the usual wide variety of sports on television for the stay-at-home variety of fans.

TONIGHT

The PNW softball tourney starts at 6 with other games at 8 and 10 at Royal Athletic Park. Play resumes Saturday at 8:30 a.m., amd concludes Sunday.

There's other softball, too, with men's playoffs continuing at Heywood Avenue and Macdonald Parks.

Harness racing is scheduled for 5:30 at Sandown Raceway with Saturday's first post at 1:30 p.m.

SATURDAY

Island Dryco Breakers and Bemister's Welding are the Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League representatives in the B.C. senior "B" women's tourney starting at Hyacinth Park at 9 a.m. Play resumes the same time Sunday.

The action for cricket fans is at Beacon Hill Park where Castaways play Alcos at 1 p.m. In the day's only other game, Metchosin plays Saanich at Metchosin.

The Shamrocks host the Vancouver Burrards in the second game of their best-of-seven WLA lacrosse semi-final series at 8 at Memorial Arena.

And there's automobile racing out at Western Speedway where time trials for stock cars and jalopies start at 7 p.m. and racing gets under way at 8.

Television

Sports coverage begins at noon with Sportsweekend on Channels 2 and 6, featuring the third round of the Peter Jackson golf classic, part of the Calgary Stampede, trotting from Greenwood Raceway in Toronto and the Swiftsure yacht race in Victoria.

At 12:30 p.m. on Channel 4 there's Wide World of Sports, including a lightweight bout between Alexis Arguello and Boza Edwards.

Oakland A's play Seattle Mariners in pro baseball on Channel 5 at 1:30 and at 2 p.m. There's a choice between third-round play in the PGA championship golf, the U.S. clay court tennis championships on Channel 7 and championship billiards on Channel 8.

Sports Spectacular on Channel 7 at 3:30 features the 1980 world individual speedway championships and on Channel 8 at 4 p.m., Wide World of Sports features the Castrol Motorcycle Grand Prix of Canada.

Burrards play rough to tie semi

It's all tied up in the Victoria Shamrocks-Vancouver Burrards best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association semi-final heading into Saturday's third game.

Burrards dumped the Rocks 16-10 at Kerrisdale Arena Thursday to even the series at 1-1 after Victoria took the opener 14-7 in Victoria Wednesday. The third game is at 8 Saturday at Memorial Arena with the fourth game Sunday in Vancouver and the fifth Wednesday back in Victoria.

Vancouver, playing it rough in their home arena, jumped into period leads of 4-1 and 11-5 and outshot Victoria 53-49. Larry Smeltzer was in goal for the Shamrocks and Vancouver had Jim Poelzer in the nets.

Kevin Alexander scored three goals for Victoria with Tarey Pollock scoring twice and Bill Marechek, Chris Hall, Jeevan Dillon, Andy Reid and Tej Labh scoring one goal each.

Vancouver got three goals from Doug Hayes and two each from Bruce Turris, Dan Perrault, Mike McMillan and Eric Otterstrom.

In the other playoff semi-final series, league-champion Coquitlam Adanacs defeated New Westminster Salmonbellies 10-4 in Queens Park Arena, New Westminster, to grab a 2-0 lead.

Randy Bryan scored four goals for Coquitlam while Gord Quilty scored two and Jim Aitchison, Rico Bellusci, Ray Mattinson and Tim Kelly each scored one.

New Westminster got two goals from Bob Tasker and singles from Len Ciminelli and Ivan Tuura.

Meanwhile, in the Ontario Lacrosse Association semi-finals, Peterborough defeated Fergus 12-6 to take a 2-1 lead and Brampton nipped Brooklin 11-10 to go into a 1-0 lead.

'Sore thumb' foils Expos

Times New Services

Right-hander Ray Burris, who had missed more than a month because of a broken thumb, stood out like one against Montreal Expos on Thursday.

The New York Mets starter made his first start since July 3, a winning one by firing a six-hitter to stop the Expos 7-1 in Montreal, reducing their lead in the East Division of baseball's National League to 1½ games over Pittsburgh Pirates.

"Man, I haven't had to wait that long for a win since there was a blackout in New York in 1978," said Burris. "I had to wait two months for that game to be finished."

Burris, who struck out two batters and walked none, took less than 2½ hours to record his fifth victory in 11 decisions. He threw only 99 pitches and relied on the Mets' defence to steer him from danger with double plays in both the second and third innings.

One of Burris's double-play victims was Warren Cromartie, who continued his recent slump by going hitless in three at bats.

"Burris was really mixing his balls well," Cromartie said. "But, why ask me? I didn't have a hit in the entire five-game series."

Cromartie had a lot of company as the Expos attempted to start a rally against Burris.

"My game plan didn't change at all," said Burris. "I wanted to keep the first two guys off base. Jerry White and Rodney Scott have good speed. Keep those guys off and it makes a difference when the third through seventh hitters are hitting with nobody on."

White, who was batting lead-off in place of the resting Ron LeFlore, collected the only hit by the Expos' first two batters with a sixth-inning triple.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead against starter Fred Norman, 2-2, as Jerry Morales belted his third homer of the season, all of them against the Expos.

Joel Youngblood smashed a two-run homer, his sixth of the year, after Lee Mazzilli's sacrifice fly had scored a run earlier in the fifth, to provide Burris with all the runs he needed.

Youngblood had singled in the fourth to stretch his hitting streak to 14 games, the longest of his career.

Vaulman records smart one-hitter

Paul Vaulman was happy with his concentration but battery-mate Don Hyman was impressed with the "sewing job."

Both undoubtedly contributed towards success as the lefthand-throwing Vaulman checked in with a masterful one-hit shutout performance to get Victoria Blues off and running in their crucial Northwest Baseball League series with the Bellingham Mariners.

Vaulman was the story Thursday at Royal Athletic Park as the second-place Blues clipped Bellingham 10-0 to close to within four games of the Northern Division leaders.

Teams meet again tonight in Nanaimo and wind up the series with a pair of game in Bellingham at the weekend.

Vaulman, a 22-year-old who joined the Blues in mid-July, said he was aware of his concentration throughout the game "because it was a game we all wanted to win."

Hyman, who caught, felt the pitcher "threaded the needle" all night.

The only slip, said Hyman, was a changeup slider that Bellingham's Paul Serna lined into left field with two out in the fifth inning. Vaulman, now with a 2-1 won-lost record, retired the remaining 13 batters in succession.

He struck out 10 and walked one. The only other Mariner to reach base got on through an error.

Matt Young, Bellingham's starter, also sailed along in shutout fashion until the roof caved in on him in the sixth inning. Two walks and five hits enabled the Blues to break it open with a six-run burst.

Outfielder Paul Stevens and switch-hitting Gary Humpston both banged out three hits to pace Victoria's 15-hit attack. Barry Moss; Paul Kirsch and Hyman each had a pair of hits.

Blues pounded out 12 of their hits in their last three innings.

Prince George defending senior 'B' women's crown

Island Dryco Breakers and Bemister's Welding, the two Victoria squads, are among nine teams from all over the province bidding for the B.C. senior "B" women's softball title here this weekend.

Defending champion Prince George is among the visiting teams for the double knockout tournament which starts Saturday morning and runs through Sunday on two diamonds at Hyacinth Park.

Game times on the first day are 9 and 11 a.m. and 1, 3 and 5 p.m. On Sunday, play is at 9 and 11 a.m. and 1 and 3 p.m. with a playoff, if it's needed, set for 5 p.m.

Other clubs competing are Nelson, Nanaimo, Vernon, Kamloops and two from the Vancouver area.

The B.C. winner will represent the province in the Western Canada championship in Nanaimo in the last week of the month.

Meanwhile, Strathcona Stingers blanked MacDonald Furniture 16-0 in Thursday night's only game in the Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League to reach the consolation playoff final. Marg Busby had three hits and scored four times for Strathcona.

In the Macdonald Men's League, Mayfair Insurance and Coast Projects both scored victories and reached the best-of-five playoff final.

Both clubs won their best-of-three semi-finals in straight games as Mayfair beat Rebels 4-2 and Coast Projects blanked Trafalgar Legion 5-0.

And at Central Park, Victoria Athletics clinched at least a first-place tie in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League by defeating Juan de Fuca 3-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Ken Fox.

UVic rower wins

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. — University of Victoria students Lisa Roy and Shelley Donald placed first and second Thursday in the final of the women's junior single sculls at the 97th Royal Canadian Henley Regatta.

Delores Young of Ridley Boat Club, St. Catharines, was third.

A UVic crew was beaten by only six feet by winners Bob Bradley and Bill Boyce of Thunder Bay Rowing Club in the final of the junior 155-pound pairs. The Hamilton Leader club was third.

Surprisingly, Thunder Bay Rowing Club and the University of Western Ontario crews stole the show in Thursday's final. They were the only two clubs to win more than one event. The powerful St. Catharines Rowing Club, regatta champion for the last 19 straight years, was held to only one final victory during the whole day.

Burleson sidelined

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Burleson, the 7-foot-2½ centre who signed with Atlanta Hawks last month, will miss at least half of the National Basketball Association exhibition season because of a broken wrist, suffered in a bicycle accident near his home.

Extra-inning setback eliminates Triangle

VANCOUVER — The quest for a B.C. Little League baseball title ended Thursday for Triangle of Victoria.

Victoria Drive of Vancouver edged Triangle 9-7 in two extra innings in the losers' bracket final to eliminate the Victoria club.

The Vancouver team meets Trail in the championship final today and would need two straight wins over the unbeaten Trail squad to take the title.

Triangle had 11 hits including a homer by Dan Woodley in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Budgets shooting for league crown

Confident of taking the playoff trophy to go with their Pacific-Northwest Fastball League title, Victoria Budgets meet Vancouver Thirsks at 6 tonight as the PNW tourney kicks off at Royal Athletic Park.

Coach Harvey Stevenson feels the Budgets have a good chance of winning what should be a great tournament with the four best teams in Washington and the four best teams in B.C. taking part.

In tonight's other games, Yakima Pepsi meets Seattle Woodinville at 8 and Clearbrook Four Star Construction takes on Seattle Pterbilt at 10.

Saturday's play opens at 8:30 a.m. with New Westminster Terminal Pub playing Seattle Westside and other games are scheduled for 10:30 a.m. and 1:30, 5:30, 8 and 10 p.m.

On Sunday, the game times are 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. and 1:30, 3:30 and if required 5:30 p.m.

Bland, Barlow on net squad

TORONTO — Two Victorians are among the four Canadians who will compete Aug. 18-22 in New York in an international young masters tennis championship, a team competition for players 21-years-old and under.

Representing Canada will be Wendy Barlow and Nina Bland, both from Victoria, Stephane Bonneau of Quebec City and Bill Cowan of Toronto. Canada is seeded fourth in the 16-country tournament.

Skalbania into soccer

Times News Services

The majority owner of Memphis Rogues says he has agreed in principle to the sale of the North American Soccer League franchise to businessman Nelson Skalbania of Vancouver.

"We confirmed and accepted Mr. Skalbania's offer," Avron Fogelman said Thursday in Memphis. "We advised him of our intentions.

"The closing will take place in September."

He declined to reveal the sale price.

The Rogues, 12-16, will finish the season in Memphis, Fogelman said, and then be moved to Calgary.

Four games remain on the club's schedule — one Saturday in Los Angeles, and three at home — against San Jose, Minnesota and Houston.

"We have sustained unrecovered losses of over $1 million in less than a year with the Rogues," said Fogelman.

In Thursday's only action, New York Cosmos edged Edmonton Drillers 3-2 and Toronto Blizzard blanked New England Teamen 3-0.

Esquimalt grabs first

League champion Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal took a step toward adding the Vancouver Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League playoff title to its awards Thursday with a 19-5 win over Victoria Athletics at Pearkes Arena.

Second game in the best-of-three final is Monday at 8 p.m.

Esquimalt got six goals from Randy Bryant while John Entzminger and Mark Bowles scored three goals each. Bob Darraugh had two goals for the Athletics.

Jim Fisher gave a sparkling performance in goal for the winners, making 53 saves.

More and more sails showing on Elk Lake

Around our shores

The colorful sails of Hobie Cats and Windsurfers are becoming a familiar sight on Elk Lake these days since Brian McLeod moved his boat centre there a couple of weeks ago.

Both types of boats are popular with dinghy sailors who like lots of action and Brian has enlisted some help in introducing the sport to others. Dave Exxy, Richard Myerscough and Ross Harrington are at the lake most evenings to give classes and pass on some of their expertise to others.

If you would like to try your hand at either of these fun craft, give Brian a ring at 658-5456.

While most yachtsmen took time off on the long weekend to go cruising, the enthusiastic Hobie Cat fleet was at Sidney Spit Sunday and Monday to take part in the four-race Vancouver Island championships.

Jim Vosburgh was the top Hobie Cat 18 skipper. Runners-up were Barry Philbrook and McLeod. The top Hobie Cat 16 skippers were Rob Woodward, Stephen Knight and Karen Brynelson.

For the first time in the fleet's history there was also a race for women only. It was won by Greba Gustafson with Judy Vosburgh as crew. Most of the women usually crew for their husbands and the race gave them a chance to work out strategy for themselves. It was so successful, that women-only races will definitely be part of the fleet's future programs.

Six-metre sailors from Seattle and Vancouver Island used the weekend to compete for the Puget Sound Six-Metre Fleet's Lipton Cup. The event was hosted by local six-metre enthusiastsf and took place in Haro Strait.

Brian Wertheimer, fleet captain of the Puget Sound group, helmed his Warhorse to victory with a total of 28½ points. In second place, with 25¼ points, was Ron McFarlane's Pacemaker of Seattle. Paul Longridge's Saga from Royal Victoria placed third with 25 points, having earned one fourth and two seconds.

Other top finishers were Scott Rohrer's Razzle Dazzle of Seattle; Bill Buursma'a Frenzy of Seattle; Buzzy III, owned by Kirk Palmer and Don Gillingham of Maple Bay, and RVYC's Llanoria, helmed by Rick Townshend.

Many of the local six-metre sailors will be in Port Townsend Aug. 16-17 to compete in the Puget Sound group's King Olaf Cup series, as well as team racing. The team racing was supposed to take place on the weekend but had to be postponed because of lack of time. The winning team gets the Barrel Trophy, donated in 1953 by Henry Kotkins, skipper of Diamond Head.

A new club is getting organized in this area and should prove popular with people who are retired and others who can take off cruising during the week. The whole idea is to enjoy sailing on days when marinas and anchorages aren't chock-a-block.

Bert Buchanan, who's helping to get the new group organized, says the idea of off-weekend cruising is catching on with such people as Dick Leir, former top navy man on this coast.

If the idea appeals to you give Bert a ring. You can reach him at 656-2095.

Members of the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club will head up-Island this weekend for a sortie around Ladysmith Harbor on Sunday.

They'll meet at the Helmcken Road-Highway parking lot at 9 a.m. to drive up to Transfer Park in Ladysmith. They will depart at 10:30 a.m. to explore the shell beaches, sandstone cliffs and other attractions of the harbor. Dennis Davis is co-ordinating this trip and can be reached at 592-1341.

Aussie yacht leading

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Australia, the 1977 foreign challenger for the America's Cup, is emerging as the yacht to beat in this year's foreign trials.

The 12-metre boat, with many crew members back from the 1977 campaign, won two more races Thursday to raise its record to a 4-0 in the first round of trials for the foreign challengers.

Australia coasted to a one minute, 49 second victory over France 3 and had an easier second race when Lionheart of England developed mainsail problems and dropped out after three legs. Australia was ahead by 53 seconds at that point.

Lionheart broke even on the day, topping Sverige of Sweden by 1:10 in its first race.

Seattle triumphs

SEATTLE (AP) — Cornell Webster raced back Jim Mazzetti's opening kickoff 98 yards for a touchdown Thursday as Seattle Seahawks went on to post a 14-10 victory over Atlanta Falcons in a National Football League exhibition game.

After that opening burst, it turned out to be a defensive struggle between two clubs that had more than their share of defensive problems last season.

Seattle went with three quarterbacks — Jim Zorn, Sam Adkins and rookie Dave Krieg — and only Adkins could get them on the scoreboard again.

Adkins completed a 45-yard pass to Steve Raible to give the Seahawks the ball on the Atlanta two-yard line. After the Falcons were guilty of two offside penalties, the Seahawks scored on a one-yard plunge by Sherman Smith.

More closures hit salmon fishermen

Some of Vancouver Island's familiar fishing locales have been hit by closures as the fisheries department continues its protection of dwindling chinook salmon runs.

Latest closures include Nanaimo waters at Jack's point, Cowichan Bay and Gold River-Muchalat Inlet.

Effective immediately, the Nanaimo area from Duke Point across to Descanso Point, from Descanso Point to Nanaimo River and estuary and up to Cedar Bridge, has been closed to commercial, sport and Indian food fisheries.

A boundary line goes up at midnight tonight in Cowichan Bay, keeping sport fishermen out of the tidal waters of the Koksilah and Cowichan Rivers and Cowichan Bay from a line from Skinner Point to the Cowichan Bay government wharf.

Non-tidal portions of the Cowichan and Koksilah Rivers also will be closed to chinook fishing. However, a jack chinook fishery will be encouraged by allowing single hook fishing, with a hook not more than two centimetres (¾-inch), for chinooks in the Cowichan and Koksilah not longer than 20 inches (50 cm) in length. The minimum size for river-caught salmon remains at eight inches.

Gold River-Muchalat Inlet waters, which incude Muchalat, Tlupana Inlet, Hanna Channel and tidal and non-tidal parts of the Gold, Burman, Deserted, Sucwoa, Canton, Conuma, Nesook and Tlure Rivers will be closed at midnight Aug. 17.

Earlier, it was announced that, starting Aug. 15 and continuing until Oct. 31, outside waters off the Nitinat Bar, where the Juan de Fuca commercial net fishing zone starts, will be closed.

Commercial salmon fishing will be closed in the area from Tsusiat Falls to a fishing boundary sign one mile east of the Nitinat Bar (around the surf line where the net area starts) and inside a line running from Pachena Point to Carmanah Point.

In that same area, sport anglers will be restricted to two chinooks a day longer than 30 inches in length, or no more than four salmon in the aggregate.

Other Nitinat sport and commercial fishing closures include the Nitinat Bar area and Narrows from Aug. 4 until further notice; Nitinat Lake at the Campus Creek area; and all tidal and non-tidal waters of the Nitinat River from Aug. 10 until Aug. 31, plus the usual existing closure of the Nitinat River from Sept. 1 to Oct. 20.

In Alberni Inlet all salmon fishing has been closed in Nahmint Bay and Nahmint River from Aug. 1 to Oct. 31.

Seventh defence

Ray Cranston and Gordon Verley of Victoria Golf Club defeated Terry Whitaker and Jim Milbrand of Glen Meadows 2 and 1 Thursday at Gorge Vale to defend the senior buttons successfully for the seventh straight time.

Illegal pitches beat Seaspray

TORONTO (CP) — Wayne Foster pitched a perfect game Thursday night to lead the unbeaten Ontario team from St. Catharines to a 6-0 victory over Alberta at the Canadian junior men's softball tournament.

The win was Ontario's third in as many games and left it alone in first place in the Red Division. Prince Edward Island is next at 2-0, followed by the New Brunswick team from Moncton, 2-1; Alberta, 1-2; Manitoba, represented by Interlaken, 0-2, and Saskatchewan, represented by Outlook, 0-3.

In other games Thursday night, Nova Scotia blanked British Columbia, represented by Victoria Seapray Properties, 1-0 on a four-hitter by Gerald Fitzgerald. The only run scored on two successive illegal pitches by loser Jim Bowden.

Doug Avery doubled for the Nova Scotia club from Guysboro and advanced a base on each illegal pitch by Bowden, who gave up only three hits in a losing cause.

Newfoundland, represented by St. John's, is next at 2-1, followed by B.C. and Quebec, both 1-2, and Yellowknife, N.W.T., 0-3.

Bradshaw's wife sues for divorce

PITTSBURGH (AP) — JoJo Starbuck, wife of Pittsburgh Steelers' quarterback Terry Bradshaw, has filed for divorce.

In a petition, Starbuck said "the marriage is irretrievably broken."

She asked the court to award unspecified amounts for support and alimony. They were married in 1976.

A break through in heating efficiency

For those who have a masonry fireplace and know it sends most of the heat up the chimney, Fresh Air Fireplaces has the solution: the Renaissance Circulation System Converter. It will transform your present masonry fireplace into an efficient, economical heat source. Available in a variety of sizes, it is easily installed in the firebox of most existing fireplaces.

Its operation is simple and unique — a controlled air intake at the bottom of the unit allows fresh air to enter the hollow bottom base, where it is heated, expands and rises in tubes that direct the heat into your home, not up the chimney.

The attractive glass doors serve two purposes: they eliminate most smoke, soot and sparks from entering your home and they prevent heated room air from escaping up the chimney.

St.Helens blows a fifth time

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens quieted today after its fifth eruption in three months. Residents of towns still digging out from ash left by earlier blasts strarted fresh clean-ups, grateful that the latest dusting was a light one.

A series of blasts from the volcano during the night spewed plumes of ash and steam more than 12 kilometres high and sent a cloud of superheated gas, ash and rocks, flowing along the mountain's north slope.

There were no reports of injuries.

The ash plume and seismic activity subsided to nothing by dawn and extremely heavy clouds had enveloped the volcano, said Federal Emergency Management Agency spokesman Joe Sears.

The eruptions were no surprise to volcano-watchers, and one scientist said "the long-term prediction is for more of the same."

The blasts began at 4:23 p.m. Thursday and continued through the night. One ash plume shot more than 12 km high and others were more than six km high, but the eruptions were described as the least forceful of the five major blasts that began on May 18.

Harmonic tremors, subterranean shivers that have occurred before other blasts, preceded the eruptions and signalled officials to evacuate scientists and forestry workers from the restricted zone around the volcano.

Pete Rowley, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist said the tremors, believed to indicate the movement of magma, had subsided early today.

After four hours of low-level harmonics on Thursday, Craig Weaver, a USGS scientist at the University of Washington, said "I'm reasonably confident it will erupt within six hours."

But within minutes, seismograph needles in the lab began waving wildly, signalling the start of an eruption.

"There she goes," said Steve Malone, UW seismologist.

After the first burst, blasts shook the mountain twice more. The steam cloud from the late-night eruption was associated with the strongest tremors.

During the first eruption, a pyroclastic flow — superheated gas and ash — slid down the mountain's north slope, stopping short of Spirit Lake. The lake was devastated by clouds of superheated gas and rock during the cataclysmic May 18 eruption that killed at least 31 people.

U.S. Forest Service spotter planes sighted a glow within the crater and along the edges of the pyroclastic flow. "It could be hot rocks, but it's more likely burning gases," Rowley said.

Ash was reported more than 160 km away. It fell lightly in Grays Harbor County on the coast, along the western slopes of the Cascade Mountains in King, Pierce, Thurston and Lewis Counties, and in Yakima, Ellensburg, and Wenatchee in eastern Washington.

Rowley said other indicators — a lessening in the amount of sulphur-dioxide gas from the crater, and change in the slope of ramparts within the huge crater — led scientists on Thursday to suspect something was happening deep within the mountain.

"The long term prediction is for more of the same," Rowley said. "We'll have a lull and then the mountain will erupt again but I'm not prepared to say how long that will be."

The May 18 blast killed 31 people, left 33 others missing, and sent ash over six states. Other blasts rocked the mountain and spread ash on Washington and Oregon on May 25, June 12 and July 22.

Britons let off Saudi flogging

LONDON (AP) — A British surgeon and his wife sentenced to public floggings in Saudi Arabia because they served alcoholic drinks at a party are safely back home after a surprise decision by Saudi authorities to let them go, the Foreign Office said today.

Richard Arnot, 36, and his wife Penelope, 32, were arrested in May 1979 after a party at their home in Jidda in which two guests died in a fall from a balcony.

Arnot served five months of a one-year jail sentence and was facing 30 strokes of the lash and Mrs. Arnot was sentenced to 80 strokes after being found guilty of breaking Moslem laws by serving alcohol at the party and other offences.

The two were on bail when told Thursday they could leave Saudi Arabia, the Foreign Office said. They were not flogged.

The gesture helps smooth ruffled relations between the two countries following the showing in April of the television drama-documentary Death of a Princess.

Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington is due to visit Saudi Arabia later this month following agreement by the two governments to restore full diplomatic relations. The Saudis asked British Ambassador James Craig to leave after the broadcast of the drama, a mixture of fact and fiction about the execution of a Saudi princess for adultery.

The Saudis said the film misrepresented Moslem laws of punishment.

The two guests who died at the Arnots' party were British nurse Helen Smith and a Dutchman, who both fell from a balcony.

GM accused of silence on problem engines

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Motors Corp. failed to notify consumers of potential transmission and engine problems in at least four million cars, the U.S. Federal Trade Commission charged today.

The automatic transmission cited in the complaint, the THM-200, is in at least four million cars and can cost as much as $600 to repair, the FTC said.

In Detroit, General Motors said in a statement, "We think the FTC complaint is unwarranted and we intend to contest it vigorously."

The FTC said the transmission problem affects most GM product lines, but other cars sold as the same model have a heavier, more reliable transmission.

Officials said consumers wanting to find if they have the transmission subject to the potential problem should inspect their car to see if the word "metric," appears on the transmission. An official said this appears to be the only way to determine if a transmission is a THM-200.

The FTC also filed charges on an unrelated problem of alleged premature camshaft wear on 305- and 350-cubic-inch V-8 engines used in several models.

Agency officials said they have received more than 1,500 complaints about the THM-200 transmission. The Centre for Auto Safety, a consumer group that urged the FTC to investigate the transmission, reported 2,000 complaints.

Major repairs can be needed after as little as 15,000 miles, but breakdowns usually come after the new-car warranty expires, FTC staffers said.

The Centre for Auto Safety, an organization that consumer advocate Ralph Nader helped found, had charged GM with substituting the THM-200 for a heavier transmission as part of its "down sizing" effort.

The FTC staff said, "GM has represented the THM-200 and the heavier THM-350 transmissions as equivalent and has failed to disclose the differing performance records to its customers."

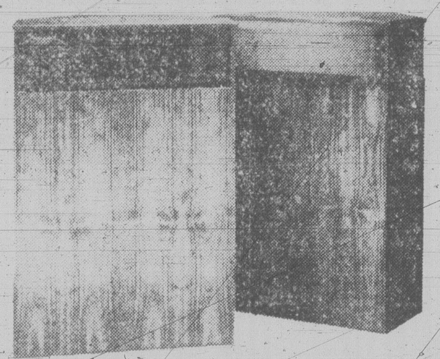
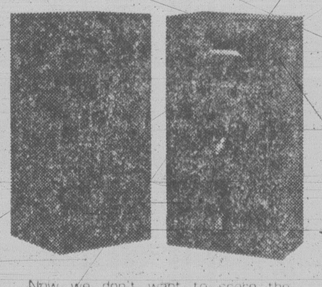
We've found a Marriage Partner

In our many years in the music business we've fallen in love with a lot of speakers — some good lookers — some smart guys — some economical systems — some efficient — some inefficient — and we've seen a lot of others that we've dumped on the first date — but now Millers is proud to announce a speaker line partner that we will be able to live with — and better yet you will too. The line is Speakerlab. The marriage of our excellent components, chosen for optimum value and performance with a loudspeaker line that will satisfy the most discerning audiophile (Bring in any speaker of similar price range and compare, we've done it!) and the most price conscious shopper, because Speakerlab speakers are available in finished walnut, or in utility vinyl, or in pre-assembled kits or as drivers & crossovers only. No mystery — just good value!



It's a Musical Instrument!

SPEAKERLAB 7WA



Now we don't want to scare the classical music lover, but the best way to show off the 7WA is to crank up some good old blow out the walls and tear up the lease rock and roll. The seven uses a two woofer system that effectively gives the cone area of a 16" woofer. The sevens were designed with the best tweeters & horns available.

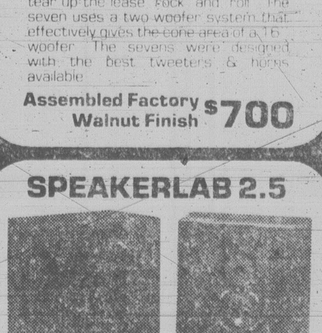
Assembled Factory Walnut Finish $700

SPEAKERLAB 6WA

The 6WA was designed for ears that enjoy the picture window clarity of the Speakerlab Wave Aperture midrange and tweeter, but don't need the enormous bass capacity of the dual woofer system. It's rare to find a speaker with so many advanced technical properties at such a refreshingly low price.

Factory Assembled Walnut Finish $590

SPEAKERLAB 2.5



This is one of those speaker systems that makes it a pleasure to shop at Millers. The 2.5 is a classic example of a dynamite speaker that won't plunge you into debt for the next millennium. And it all fits into a slim, beautiful 1.8 cubic foot enclosure.

Fully Assembled Walnut $430

SPEAKERLAB 1

Sometimes less is more. Meet the Speakerlab One. Far and away better than the speakers that come in all the small component systems we've seen. The S1 is designed to get the most out of relatively inexpensive or low powered receivers.

Assembled Walnut $230

Come in and let us show you how to save up to 35% by assembling your own kits for each of these speakers.

Screaming mob held at bay

WASHINGTON (CP) — "Get out while you can," screamed the stocky, sweating American, "we know who you are."

As a short, ugly show of stripped-bare human emotions, Thursday's protest by Iranians in Lafayette Park, directly opposite the White House, couldn't be improved upon.

For nearly four hours, ringed by blue-helmeted policemen on foot, horseback and motorcycles, about 200 gaunt-faced Iranians faced a barrage of eggs, garbage and insults from a much-larger surrounding crowd.

Ostensibly, this Iranian demonstration was to protest ill treatment that the 191 Iranians arrested here two weeks ago after a wild, fighting march through downtown streets received at the hands of police.

Quoting an unidentified U.S. state department official, NBC News said it was hoped that some of the captives would be freed to coincide with the end of the Moslem holy month, Ramadan. But it said the Iranian militants learned of what was happening and organized the demonstrations to provoke anti-American feeling in Iran.

This time, swaggering legions of police carrying riot sticks calmly gazed at angry Americans through chrome-covered sunglasses, keeping them back from the Iranians, some of whom were still bandaged from their last encounter with the law.

"The Ayatollah sucks," chanted the crowd, when some Iranians raised a colored picture of Iranian leader Ayatollah Khomeini. A rain of eggs quickly spattered the photograph as the crowd cheered.

Some of the Americans were plainly driven to near-rage by the Iranians' nerve in publicly demonstrating at the White House while 52 captives remain in Iran, hostages of the Khomeini regime.

There was the man in the blue polyester suit, one moment calmly eating his lunch at a nearby park bench, the next leaping to his feet to pull a tomato from his lunch bag and hurl it at an Iranian.

He was arrested and taken away in a paddy wagon.

On the crowd's fringe prowled a bearded youth, dressed in an Uncle Sam costume complete with red-and-white striped top hat, carrying a straw-filled bag over which he had stretched a rubber Khomeini mask, inside a noose.

A loud cheer arose when a middle-aged Iranian woman, in traditional garb including a shawl-like chuddar covering her head, passed out in the humid, 35-degree Celsius heat.

After police cleared a path for stretcher bearers to a battered old buick, a motorcyclist suddenly sped through traffic to cut the car off, as a small crowd surged into the street to leap on the car's roof and aim kicks at its windows.

"Your wives are at home, sleeping with pigs," some Americans yelled, trying to taunt the Iranians to step outside the police lines. None did so.

Finally, it was over. Walkie-talkies crackled, new police lines formed, and the Iranians were escorted to three waiting city buses as bystanders shouted insults and waved the American flag.

"They got you good," an American called to one bandaged Iranian who shifted his crutches to one hand as he stepped on the bus, "but we're going to get you better next time."

GOP picks ex-Nazi

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — An ex-Nazi who once taped a telephone message saying blacks should be banned from two Detroit suburbs has stunned Michigan's Republican hierarchy by winning a GOP congressional primary.

Dismayed GOP regulars said Thursday they would give no support to self-described white supremacist Gerald Carlson, the GOP nominee in the 15th District.

Party leaders said they would urge 15th District voters to write in James Caygill, the loser of the GOP primary.

1,200 flee barge fire

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 1,200 people were forced to leave their homes along Galveston Bay when a barge loaded with petrochemical burst into flames after colliding with a ship Thursday, authorities said.

Officials hoped high tides caused by Hurricane Allen would help tugboats pull the burning barge from the channel today.

"It is a very dangerous operation, but we've got to get it out of there," said U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Ron Mahal.

The barge exploded when it collided with a British wheat ship. Five men from the tugboat pulling the barge were taken to hospital after the collision. Two of them, including the tug captain, were in critical condition late Thursday, authorities said.

No injuries were reported aboard the British wheat ship Fort Calgary, outbound with a 36,000-ton cargo for Chile. The coast guard said the ship received only minor damage.

The barge was loaded with butadiene, a petrochemical used in production of synthetic rubber, authorities said.

After the collision, the barge ran aground half a kilometre from shore in only a metre of water, preventing fire boats from moving in to extinguish the blaze.

Senior Electrical/Instrument Engineer
Senior Mechanical Engineer — Paper Mill

MacMillan Bloedel is Canada's largest forest products company, Canadian owned and operated with headquarters in British Columbia — but worldwide in scope. We conduct manufacturing and marketing activities in 50 countries and transport cargo to virtually all major ports but we consider our 24,500 employees to be our most important resource. MacMillan Bloedel is interested in people who can meet challenging opportunities.

We require two engineers for our Alberni Pulp & Paper Division in Port Alberni, B.C.

The Alberni Pulp & Paper Division is multi-product complex (newsprint, linerboard, kraft pulp) producing in excess of 1100 tpd of newsprint on three modern high speed machines. An expansion and modernization program is underway to further increase the capacity and efficiency in the newsprint area.

Located on Vancouver Island, Port Alberni is one of Canada's most favoured communities, with a mild year round climate. The population of approx. 30,000 enjoys full health and recreational facilities, including extensive fresh and salt water fishing. Port Alberni is ideally located for easy access to all areas and centres of B.C.'s beautiful west coast.

Senior Mechanical Engineer — Paper Mill

This position will appeal to a Mechanical Engineer with experience in engineering design and project work in a paper mill.

Responsibilities will include:
- involvement with expansion projects.
- providing technical and engineering services to the pulp mill maintenance and operating departments.
- to carry out, or commission studies in the field of plant and equipment maintenance.

Qualifications:
- Candidates must be a Registered Professional Engineer and be eligible for registration in B.C.
- Must have a minimum of 7 years Engineering Newsprint experience obtained in the pulp and paper industry.

Senior Electrical/Instrument Engineer

This position will appeal to an Electrical Engineer with experience in process control and microprocessor systems.

Responsibilities will include:
- providing process control engineering support for Alpulp's Design Engineering Department.
- preparing or evaluating process control loops, instrument specifications and provide field engineering assistance to installation crews.

Qualifications:
- Candidates must be a Registered Professional Engineer and eligible for registration in B.C.
- Must have a minimum of 7 years Engineering experience, preferably in the pulp and paper industry.

These positions offer an excellent opportunity into Design supervision and management.

We offer a competitive salary, a complete range of benefit plans, excellent working conditions and relocation assistance.

If you are interested in the career opportunity, please send your resume to:

Win the club in dummy with the king, following suit with the nine from your hand. Lead a diamond and win East's nine with the ten.

Now play the ten of clubs to the ace and lead another diamond from dummy, this time finessing the queen. Cash the ace of diamonds and exit from your hand with the carefully preserved deuce of clubs!

West is forced to win the club with the seven and return a heart, thus presenting you with the rest of the tricks.

Plumbing know-how pays

NEW YORK (AP) — In the end, it was a simple plumber's test plug that stopped a leak in a 9,000-gallon propane tank truck on the George Washington Bridge and ended a two-state traffic jam that brought parts of Manhattan to a standstill.

The 14-lane bridge, the biggest entryway to the city, was closed for nearly eight hours Thursday while the truck sat on an exit ramp and anxious officials tried to figure out how to stop the hissing gas.

Fears of a fiery explosion prompted the evacuation of about 2,000 people from apartments near the bridge, closed a Port Authority bus terminal and shut down a nearby subway station.

Traffic backed up for 25 kilometres in New York and neighboring New Jersey — one of the biggest tie-ups in New York City's history. Buses and cars on the West Side of Manhattan slowed to a crawl and sidewalk vendors had a field day keeping motorists supplied with juice and soda as temperatures climbed past 32 degrees Celsius.

The trouble started shortly after 10 a.m. when the driver heard a hissing noise, stopped on the exit ramp, and called for help.

The leak continued, despite efforts to cap a defective valve, until 5:20 p.m., when a plug costing about $4 was borrowed from a Bronx plumbing supply house.

The plug was the brainstorm of Officers Donald Thacke, 37, a former plumber. It was inserted, tightened down, and the leak stopped. After that, it took 22 minutes to pump the remaining propane from the disabled tanker, and get traffic rolling again on the two-level span over the Hudson River.

Hero's laurels for rinky-dink yachtsman

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — A 33-year-old British sailor wrote himself into the record books Thursday after sailing round the world single-handed in the smallest vessel ever known to complete the voyage.

Shane Acton, who left his home in Cambridge, northeast of London, in 1972 with only £20 pounds ($54) in his pocket, returned 26,400 nautical miles and eight years later to a civic reception and an unexpected message of congratulations from Prince Philip.

Shane's record-breaker is Super Shrimp, a 5.4-by-1.8-metre craft, originally designed for weekend sailing, which held off gale force winds, massive waves and a virtual shipwreck to bring its skipper back unscathed.

A crowd of 500 residents lined the banks of Cambridge's River Cam as Shane sailed home with an escort of a dozen ships to be welcomed by the mayor and a guard of honor of sea cadets.

He first arrived back in Britain July 26, sailing quietly into the seaside resort of Walton-on-the-Naze in Essex county, before making his way along the English east coast and up the River Cam to this university city.

The Guinness Book of World Records confirmed that Shane's boat had broken the record. The smallest previous vessel to circumnavigate the world was the Ahodori II, Japanese-skippered and 20 centimetres longer, which had held the title since 1974.

But, as the spokesman pointed out, "the Ahodori did it in just over a year."

Arriving with the Swiss girlfriend he met on the trip, Shane told reporters he was absolutely delighted. "But I never thought it would take eight years. At the time, I just thought I'd see how long I could stay away," he said.

His achievement was all the more remarkable as he had never sailed before the marathon voyage. Local residents still remember how he simply motored down the river and stopped to find out how to put the sail up.

The message from Prince Philip followed a meeting Shane had with the prince in Brisbane, Australia, while the boat was being repaired in a swimming pool.

"Congratulations on your epic journey," the telegram said. "I hope Super Shrimp has gained an honorable retirement."

Ingenious idea really took fire

SEATTTLE (AP) — For Jeri and James Hamlett, using their vacuum cleaner to siphon gasoline from the car through a length of garden hose left a bad taste in their mouth, which is exactly what they were trying to avoid.

The technique was intended to avoid having to start the siphoning by sucking the hose with their mouths.

"All of a sudden there just seemed to be a big streak of fire all along the floor of the garage," Mrs. Hamlett said. "Then there were these little explosions ... the scuba tanks in there."

The couple pushed the car out of the burning garage so it received only minor paint damage. But flames destroyed their motorcycle, the garage and about $2,000 worth of the couple's scuba equipment before firefighters extinguished the blaze.

Only one dead in plane crash

NOUAKCHOTT, Mauritania (AP) — Investigators are still trying to determine what caused a Romanian jetliner to plunge into the Atlantic off this West African country and how 171 of the 172 people aboard managed to survive.

Thirteen of the survivors were injured, four gravely, including the pilot, but only one person died in the accident and the rest "are in good health," officials said.

The jetliner was carrying 18 crew members and 154 Romanian fishermen due to relieve crews aboard fishing vessels in the Atlantic when it plunged into the sea Thursday.

It was approaching the airport at Nouadhibou, Mauritania's principal port, with no sign the pilot had made a distress signal, the official Mauritanian news agency said.

However, an official of the French airline UTA said that for unexplained reasons the plane dipped to the right on approach.

The plane went down five kilometres short of the runway and about 300 metres from the coast. The weather was described as acceptable, with a normal wind and good visibility.

A Mauritanian navy vessel and two trawelers rushed to the scene and plucked some of the survivors from the water, while others swam ashore; the UTA official said.

Hotel fire kills six

BUNDORAN, Ireland (AP) — Fire swept through a resort hotel on Donegal Bay early today, killing six people and injuring at least eight, some jumping from windows in their pajamas and robes, police said.

The dead included a girl of 17 and a boy of 10, police said. A number of other guests were unaccounted for and a search of the badly damaged building was under way.

The fire broke out just after midnight at the 40-room Central Hotel in the County Donegal seaside resort on the northwest coast of the Irish Republic.

First reports said 100 guests evacuated the burning hotel, and that several were rescued from upper floors by firemen with ladders.

But of Kissinger — "he was looking for a quick result, like a Hollywood star, to do something flamboyant. It was all for U.S. public opinion, not for the welfare of Vietnam."

Eagle Sarmont, the California hang-glider pilot who was grounded by the Canadian transport department, has decided to fold his wings in Baie-Comeau, Que., and head back to New York State. Sarmont, who proposed to try to fly across the Atlantic in his motorized hang-glider, was grounded on July 21 when the department ruled that neither he nor his glider was licensed to fly in Canadian air space. "To put it mildly, I'm very disappointed," Sarmont said. "I don't feel I've had a fair hearing because the minister has not had all the essential information."

One of the longest winning streaks in game show history has ended and Lt. Thom McKee, the U.S. Navy pilot who rode it for nine weeks, is richer by $312,700 and eight cars. McKee, based at Miramar Naval Air Station in San Diego, said he was relieved his stint on the U.S. television game show Tic Tac Dough was over. His string of victories finally ended when he was defeated this week by computer analyst Erik Kraepelien. McKee, 24, a native of Rome, N.Y., played 88 games in 46 shows and missed only 32 of 385 questions. After he lost, he thanked God, his wife, his parents and the Navy — in that order.

Dear Abby:

Have you ever heard of a sexy 7-year-old? My sister has one. Her daughter, Linda, is the sexiest kid you'll ever see. She's rather shy around women, but she flirts and climbs all over every man she sees. She doesn't have to know him very well, either. She acts this way with strangers. I worry about her.

Linda is an only child. Her parents were divorced when she was 2, and she hasn't seen her father since. My sister is soured on men and hasn't had a man in her life since Linda's father took off.

Abby, what would make a 7-year-old girl act like this? And how can I help? I'm so afraid her actions will get her into trouble one day.

Concerned Aunt

Dear Concerned:

It's natural for little girls who have been ignored or neglected by their fathers to reach out for male attention and approval from any man who's handy. Share your concern with your siter and urge her to get counselling for Linda. Early therapy could avert a tendency toward sexual promiscuity later.

Dear Abby:

My husband had a vasectomy four months ago, and I just found out that I am pregnant!

My husband, in an absolute rage, went immediately to the doctor who performed his vasectomy. The doctor reminded my husband that he had been instructed to return for a test to determine the success of the operation, but my husband got busy, got the flu, had to leave town on business, and he never did get back for the test.

I understand that once in a blue moon a vasectomy fails, so please do your readers a favor and tell them that after a man has had a vasectomy, he should go back for that test.

Blue Moonstuck

Dear Blue:

All chances are foolish. But some chances are more foolish than others.

Dear Abby:

I am an artist and a craftsman who has given many pieces of handmade jewelry and art to friends and relatives. They seem to think that if they lose an earring, or drop it and step on it, it's my responsibility to repair or replace it. Or if the colors in one of my paintings doesn't match their sofa pillows, I should change it for them!

Why should I have to replace, repair or adjust a gift after I have given it?

If my gifts were ordinary it would be another matter, but I get top prices for my work, and I think the recipients of my gifts would have the good manners to thank me and keep quiet, or throw them away if they so choose. After I give something I don't care what they do with it; neither do I want the responsibility for it for the rest of my life.

Karel Loganhume at play with David Haughton, Rennie Foster, Katy Henderson and Craig Brodsgaard (on floor)

Karel grew up on child's play

In the city of Bristol, England, there was, before the Second World War, a neighborhood where the kids took a special joy in creating their own brand of dramatic action. They were a rather special lot in inventing theatrical play as time was to show.

Deborah Kerr at age seven, and known to the playmates she dominated as "Carotty" Knight, took an active lead with her own small theatre at the bottom of her aunt's garden.

The younger children, such as four-year-old Karel Loganhume were deligated to minor roles with which Karel soon got fed up. She decided to give a more well-rounded and dramatic performance.

As a result she took so long to die that she was fired by the strong-minded Kerr.

And then there was Arthur Hailey who frequently commandeered the wooden boxes the other children used for theatre purposes to make plays about aeroplanes. His flaring imagination provided hours of exciting theatre.

That's all part of the childhood Victoria's Karel Loganhume remembers, because she was right in there, flying in Hailey's planes and fighting and suffering among the cowboys and Indians that were prime favorites in other theatrical play.

Karel was the daughter of a musically active family; she attended a school where she was surrounded by the arts in a city that has always been renowned for its artistic life.

Her early love of the theatre took a different course to that of some of her playmates. She discovered her special gift was teaching, and she put that together with her avocation with excellent results, not only to herself but to probable hundreds of fortunate young people.

A lot of Victoria youngsters have responded to her buoyant personality and wise and intelligent application of her training, for Karel is a member of the teaching staff of Bastion Theatre School.

She attended Homerton College at Cambridge where she earned her Diploma of Education. English universities don't recognize theatre as an academic subject, she reminds you, "so I took langauge arts and physical education."

One great advantage was coming under the tuition of Rudolf Laban, internationally famous for his analysis of movement and the invention of a system of notation for it.

A teaching post at a school near London allowed her to study speech and acting after 4 p.m. when she traveled up to London to work with Eric Ward who had been a student of Henry Irving and Beerbohm Tree. Teaching, studying, attending teachers' seminars, Karel also was given the opportunity of acting in Ward's company.

She loved working with children who had problems. She recalls the thrill of achieving a breakthrough with a little fellow who had a learning difficulty with arithmatic. It came the morning after she had received a standing ovation for her role in one of Ward's productions.

"It meant much more to see the sudden light in the child's eyes and experience his triumph than to hear the audience applause,." she says.

At about this time Karel received two offers; a scholarship at the Central School of Speech and Theatre, and, as the result of an application to the Victoria School Board, the offer of a teaching job from B.C. Education Department's J.F.K. English.

New horizons proved most tempting and Karel emigrated to B.C.

The next few years were occupied with teaching, study at Banff, activity with the Victoria Theatre Guild, marriage and two children. And a B.F.A. degree from the University of Victoria where she also taught for a while.

With the August summer session for pre-schoolers and juniors, now being registered by Bastion Theatre executive director Helen Simpson-Baikie, Karel enters her sixth year with the school.

One of her specialties is movement for the stage — body language, words chosen, use of voice. "It's the way you enter a room, pick up a book, sit, walk, light a cigaret, inflect a word, that communicates character, mood, temper, relationship to others sharing the scene.

"Movement can be as subtle and telling as the flicker of an eyelid," she says.

Stage movement is taught to juniors from the age of 11 and up to adults. For the younger ones the emphasis is on creativity.

"It's more of a therapy than a serious theatre course; we're not focussing on making the children into actors," she says. "They're learning to communicate, to gain confidence and get over shyness — it's a place where they can play out their daydreams.

"Of course if there are some who are gifted and want to pursue theatre training they have that opportunity."

She would like seniors and adults to know that stage movement does not call for leotards and vigorous workouts. It's learning to use one's body more expressively and participants can wear whatever is comfortable.

Karel has become an essential resource person, not only for Bastion but more recently for Ron Vincent at the Victoria Racquet Club. Vincent is director of education for the Professional Figure Skating Association of Canada and founder of the Ice Dance Theatre of Canada.

With the aim of creating first rate and meaningful choreography for skaters, Karel has been following initial work done by Carl and Clara Hare, applying Laban's art of movement, on ice.

She has made video tapes that have gone to coaches across Canada, pioneering beyond the boundaries of conventional ice choreography in a field first explored by ice star Toller Cranston.

Healey Willan set to feature singers

Members of the Amity Singers will take part Saturday in Christ Church Cathedral's commemorative series of Healey Willan recitals.

Willan, considered the dean of Canadian composers wrote hundreds of works for ensemble and solo voice, organ and other instruments, during his long tenure as precentor of St. Mary Magdalene in Toronto.

He was one of Canada's most honored composers and the only one to be invited to compose music for Queen Elizabeth's coronation. Centenary of his birth is in October.

The series this week will feature madrigals, part songs as well as sacred works. The singers will be conducted by Norman Hurrle.

Next Saturday Willan's great Prelude and Fugue in B minor and some of his Chorale Preludes will be played by organist David Hamilton. Also the Sonata I in E minor for Violin and Piano will be performed by Sidney Humphreys with Hurrle. Recital time is 4 p.m.

Colitis queries culled for this column

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

Culled from the letters of many readers comes this series of questions about colitis.

Q. — What is colitis?

A. — Colitis is an infection or inflammation of the inner lining of the colon, rectum or other parts of the large intestine. Sometimes the infection also involves the junction of the small and large intestines. The latter condition is called, "ileo-colitis."

Q. — What are the causes of colitis?

A. — Viruses, bacteria, longstanding constipation, severe emotional strain, parasites and amebic dysentery are some of the causes.

Q. — Is "ulcerative colitis" the same as "colitis?"

A. — "Ulcerative colitis" means that, in addition to the inflammation, there are small breaks or ulcers in the delicate lining of the colon. These ulcers are then exposed to invasion by bacteria, with many associated complications. In many instances, ulcerative colitis may become a chronic condition. Sometimes the symptoms completely disappear and then suddenly recur during a period of emotional distress or physical debilitation. It has been noted for a long time that patients with ulcerative colitis are usually highly tense, easily discouraged and apprehensive.

Q. — How is the diagnosis of ulcerative colitis made?

A.— The patient's history often suggests to the doctor the possibility that the illness exists. To verify this, microscopic examination of the stool for blood and mucous is very important. X-ray examination of the lining can reveal evidence to confirm the diagnosis. The lining of the rectum and the lower portion of the colon can be minutely inspected with an instrument called the proctoscope. This procedure can be done in the doctor's office. Although it is mildly unpleasant, it is not painful. Cultures and biopsies can be made through this instrument that can contribute valuable information for the diagnosis and subsequent treatment.

Q. — Is an "irritable colon" the same as colitis?

A. — "Irritable colon" is a vague and incorrect description of a condition. The symptoms are so varied and so similar to many other intestinal conditions that "irritable colon" is no longer thought of as a firm, positive diagnosis.

Q. — What is the treatment for ulcerative colitis?

A. — Sulfa drugs, antibiotics, cortisone and strict diet can control many of the symptoms and complications of this condition. Psychological support can be helpful in the ultimate recovery of these patients.

youth clinic

Dear Dr. Levine:

This letter is both a plea for advice and an attempt to help others. I am finding that a constant dilemma faces many girls today. It is the decision whether to remain uninvolved sexually, or to give in to what appears to be a natural occurrence, if you are "in love."

In my case, the decision has been a learning experience. At 18, I became sexually intimate with someone I truly cared for. Dave, 20, and I thought we were in love. After we broke up, however, we could not even talk with each other.

Since we both attend the same school, we run into each other quite frequently, and it is very awkward. We stand there not able to carry on a normal conversation and I think it is because we feel embarrassed about how close we once were.

Therefore, for those who also face the decision of whether to become lovers, I feel it is important to consider the future. How will you feel running into him, after you are no longer involved? Will you be able to look him in the face, and talk as two people?

Personally, the memories of the past do not compensate for the misery I experience when I run into him now.

Should I make an attempt to sit down with Dave, and explain how I feel when I am around him: That I want to be able to relate to him as a person? He never was too open about his feelings, and most of my friends think I am wasting my breath.

Answer: Any regular readers of this column recognize by now my feelings about the do's and don'ts of sexual intercourse. We've talked about carying, responsibility, honesty, sensitivity as well as attractiveness, eroticism, and lust.

We've discussed age and maturity, and physical as well as emotional "readiness". In all this time, however, I never offered the rationale for having or not having sexual intercourse on the basis of possible embarrassment when meeting after a split.

Now that really takes foresight. Not only is it unusual, but these are not the kinds of thoughts that cross the minds of two lovers.

I am not trying to belittle your present feelings. Often early intimacy convinces us of "true love", and subsequent break-up is disillusioning. It is also not unusual for young ex-lovers to avoid each other like the plague for a considerable time after the split. I don't know enough about Dave to advise you, but your suggestion is a mature and thoughtful one, and might break the ice between you. Your friends' advice may be better ignored, so you'll obviously have to make the ultimate decision.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am a 15-year-old girl and my problem is that I can't have my hair cut or leave it out. I always have to keep it in a pony-tail or braids. My sister has her hair cut and so does my half-sister. Just a week ago, my cousin got her hair cut. My parents say that girls that cut their hair are tramps. They make up some stupid excuse about my sister's haircut. I am afraid to leave my hair out at school becuse they might find out. What am I going to do?

Answer: On the surface, it looks as though you are going to have to wait until you achieve the degree of independence from your parents your sisters have. But I suspect that you have not said that this is part of a religious practice that some members of your family follow and others don't, men included.

If so, it is part of a most honorable tradition in religion, and you are caught in the middle in a family that has not really followed its own best tradition. So you are fighting, not merely your parents' uncertainty about what to do with a 15-year-old girl, but their own bad conscience about themselves. If this is true, then try forgiving them: To know all is to forgive all.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I am a 13-year-old female. I have a problem that is embarrassing to me. It's my eyebrows. I just started plucking them recently. If I didn't pluck them they would be long and bushy. What causes this? Can it be prevented? When I'm older will they be like all the other girls' brows that I see?

Answer: Like all other parts of the body, eyebrows are individual to you and their shape, size and colors are inherited.

Plucking is part of the answer to your problem. It can be done painlessly and harmlessly. The length of hairs will not be affected by plucking and they will have to be trimmed. It is difficult to do yourself because many girls keep on pulling hairs out until there is no eyebrow left. I would suggest you talk to your mother and ask her to make an appointment with a cosmetician who specializes in hair removal.

If you get your eyebrows well shaped at the beginning it will be easier to keep them looking attractive if you just pluck out the new hairs as they grow back in.

Community return community-aided volunteering

The Capital Mental Health Association is a non-profit organization comprised of staff and volunteers who provide services in the Victoria area for people recovering from mental and emotional problems.

The CMHA operates several facilities, each providing services for a different need. Laurel House is one of these. Its members come frm all areas of Victoria and are of all ages, from 17 to 80. There are in any given day up to 70 people coming to Laurel House and in any given week up to 200.

As in any nonprofit organization the budget is small — so the staff are few. Who, then, fills the gap? The wonderful, dedicated volunteer. There is nothing complicated about being a volunteer at Laurel House. There are few qualifications that would bar anyone from becoming involved in the programs. All that is needed is a genuine desire to help another human being, a large measure of friendship, and some time to share a craft, a skill, or a liking for sport or recreation.

Each day is divided into segments devoted to different activities. A typical day would see baking and salad making in the kitchen, outdoor games, swimming at the Queenswood or Oak Bay Recreation Centre pools, pottery in the pottery room with its excellent kiln, weaving under the guidance of one of the volunteers from the Victoria Weavers Guild, and quilt making or knitting.

As well as activities there are quiet times when a volunteer contributes to recovery just by sharing time as a friend — perhaps talking or going for a walk.

The volunteers are both men and women. There are many men at Laurel House who appreciate having a man to talk to, to play a game with, or perhaps to help them with maintenance around "the House". If anyone has an hour or two to spare or can join a group in an activity, they are encouraged to call Peggy Aust at Laurel House. The phone number there is 595-1151.

Laurel House at present has a special need for volunteers to help with the following daytime programs.

The music appreciation program needs a volunteer to lead a small group in singing and playing a variety of instruments. The volunteer must be able to read music. The time of the program would be arranged with the volunteer.

Volunteers are needed to take individuals or small groups to events and places in the community, such as concerts, art shows, films, parks, and museums. The volunteer might also help members get to know bus routes and learn other practical skills.

The ceramics program, just beginning to produce items for the Christmas bazaar, needs a volunteer who is familiar with the methods of ceramics to teach these skills to members.

Volunteers who can come in to chat or initiate and play table games such as scrabble and poker, are very much appreciated at Laurel House. This would be an interesting position for someone who likes to play table games or who enjoys a quiet conversation and is able to initiate these activities with members.

A male volunteer able to use small hand tools is needed to work with male members to create small wooden objects. The tools will be provided and the hours will be arranged with the volunteer.

The crafts program has a need for a retired man to share his knowledge and experience in the area of crafts with members. Again, the hours will be arranged with the volunteer.

The gift shop of a mental health institution, also operated by the CMHA, needs a volunteer to help share duties with the co-ordinator of the shop. The volunteer would work regular part-time hours and would help with the ordering of supplies, handling of cash and checking of stock.

For information on these and other volunteer opportunities, contact the Victoria Volunteer Bureau at 386-2269. The office is open Monday to Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Most-valuable puckster turns commercial cheek

EDMONTON (CP) — Wayne Gretzky, the National Hockey League's most valuable player in 1979-80, rates his bum a modest five on a scale from one to 10.

But GWG Ltd. rates it much higher. The Edmonton-based manufacturer of jeans, sportswear and workwear signed a two-year contract with the 19-year-old hockey star.

Gretzky, a centre with Edmonton Oilers, will get a hefty — but undisclosed — salary for posing his posterior for the company's award-winning BUM BUM television commercials.

"Next time I fall on the ice I'll have to be more careful where I land," Gretzky told a news conference.

The contract could result in his rear end — size 32 — becoming as well-known as the number 99 on his hockey sweater.

Gretzky said appearing in BUM BUM commercials will only be part of his contract activities.

He will also participate in a series of GWG hockey clinics to be held in major centres throughout Canada.

House dick updated with electronic touch

Ozzie Kaban . . . the game is prevention

VANCOUVER (CP) — The man who provides security services for two Vancouver hotel chains says the days of the house dick are gone.

"I have a little different approach," says Ozzie Kaban. "I don't like hiding behind poles and gumshoeing it."

Kaban uses modern electronics such as closed circuit belevision, and staff are trained to "approach the human being as you would like to be approached yourself."

"Preventive security is the name of the game right now, making sure your client doesn't get hurt. It's too late once something is taken."

Kaban, whose company provides security systems for Vancouver's Delta and Sheraton chain hotels as well as the Bayshore Inn, said the preventive approach involves making sure undesirables either don't get in the door or spend as little time inside as possible.

"I have no time for thieves, conmen or hookers," he says. "We will not allow hookers to operate in any of our hotels."

Kaban says it takes more than just judgment to spot trouble, it takes a sixth sense of sorts.

"You cannot judge people on looks," says Kaban, a former RCMP officer. "A guy can come in off a yacht wearing jeans, long hair and a beard and be worth a million dollars. On the other hand, a guy pulling up in a leased Cadillac with alligator shoes and a perfect manicure can be a bum."

Kaban isn't smug about the effectiveness of his operation, even if he can claim the theft rate in his hotels is about nil.

"You're dealing with very, very intelligent people, even if their intelligence is misdirected. You try to be one up on them, but these are the people who force you to be as effective as possible.

"If you think you're a great detective, if you think you're good, you're nuts."

Kaban says thieves can be rich too, and that means they will have access to the latest equipment.

One of the most effective tools hotel security people use is neither electronic nor expensive.

"The phrase 'May I help you' is one of the most damaging questions to a would-be thief," Kaban says. "If he doesn't come up with an answer quick, he's out."

Removing a nuisance from the premises calls for firmness and diplomacy. Kaban doesn't believe in violence and would prefer to have even the most obnoxious offender leave with dignity intact.

His reputation for handling tricky situations with apparent ease is widespread, and Kaban has been called upon to personally guard visitors such as Frank Sinatra, Ginger Rogers and Shaun Cassidy.

"Everybody thinks a bodyguard is seven feet tall, weights 900 pounds and packs a gun on each hip," Kaban says.

What clients such as Sinatra really are looking for, he says, is someone who can avoid trouble, not make it.

Medicine man has following

CROSS LAKE, Man. (CP) — Indian medicine man John Daniel Blacksmith says he's not in competition with the health care station here. In fact, he wishes the station would look after all the local aches and pains.

But Blacksmith has gained a reputation in this central Manitoba community of 2,200 treaty Indians and 450 Metis, about 90 kilometres north of Lake Winnipeg.

Many people come to him regularly for cures for aching teeth, gallstones, blood poisoning, bleeding and other ailments — even love affairs gone awry.

"I always ask them if they've been to the nursing station first," said Blacksmith, 67. "If they have, and still need help, I try my best."

Most of Blacksmith's medicines are derived from herbs and roots used in secret, centuries-old combinations. In other cases, it's the "inspiration of the moment."

"You look at a person and start imagining what might help them. Then you think of something. You try it and it works."

Blacksmith said he inherited much of his knowlege and power from his father and grandfather.

"Once one of my uncles went crazy and it took eight men to hold him to the ground," he said.

"My father got them to set my uncle free and just by putting one hand on the man he calmed him down and set him gently on the ground."

"This power can't be explained," he added. "It's a gift a man is given to help his people."

Blacksmith remembers using his gift when a friend asked him to help a boy who was having fits.

"The child was screaming and hollering when I put my hand on his head.

"After five minutes he broke into a sweat. Then he began to relax and quiet right down. Today the boy is 18 years old and is a good, normal man."

At a trapper's camp in winter, Blacksmith was asked to help a woman who was bleeding badly from the nose.

"Someone in the camp had two pails of moose milk which they gave me to drink to give me strength to do my work. Then I set out into the cold night wondering where I'd find the flowers and herbs to heal the bleeding."

The plant he was seeking was the Lady Jane lace flower, which blooms in the north during the summer.

"It was a miracle," Blacksmith said. "The snow was four feet deep on the ground and all at once I found one flower sitting there, just as if it was summertime."

Blacksmith held some of the flower and leaves under the woman's nose, had her chew some of the root and boiled up the rest for her to swallow.

"The hemorrhaging stopped."

The only people Blacksmith turns away are cripples.

"I guess they were just meant to be that way."

Plastic coated teeth an idea for children

WINNIPEG (CP) — A University of Manitoba professor says children prone to tooth decay now can have their teeth protected with a tough plastic coating.

However, Dr. Colin Dawes, professor of oral biology, recommends that the process be confined to children whose teeth are particularly prone to cavities or who live in areas not served by fluoridated water.

Dawes also said that while the sealant protects areas where it is applied for up to three years, there can still be problems with decay starting between the teeth where the sealant cannot be applied.

He said the sealant, which has been used locally for more than a year, takes only about 20 minutes to apply.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR
Saturday, August 9, 1980

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have chance to imprint style, initiate policy, get to heart of maters. Love is in picture as you complete a very important cycle. You have rare "second chance" to be fulfilled, happy — and more financially secure. A child could be involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New approach provides answers to dilemma resulting from leases, property, stuborn "authority figure" who seems intent on making life difficult. Obtain hint from Aries message — polish "presentation." You will make real progress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Forces tend to be scattered; lunar aspect is favorable and short trip results in valuable contact. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius natives figure in scenario. You gain rare insight into motives of one who is attempting to manipulate you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Elements of timing, good judgment, experience and luck combine — financial bonanza could result. Gemini and Sagittarius natives figure in scenario. Expand base of operations. You can attract "substantial" investors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can rebuild, make corrections, define meanings and make exciting, constructive contacts. Cycle is such that you can successfully take initiative, lead, pioneer and assert views in positive manner. Scorpio and Aquarius persons figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get glimpse "backstage." Look behind scenes. Deal with one who represents club, organization or hospital. Gemini, Sagittarius and another Virgo figure prominently. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Change occurs — it is beneficial.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Desire is fulfilled; friendship is rekindled. You have new hope — you no longer are alone. Major adjustment occurs on domestic scene. Taurus, another Libra and a Scorpio play significant roles. A "valuable" gift is "on the way."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Career opportunity is spotlighted — get promises, commitments "in writing." Steer clear of schemes — and self-deception. Show your shrewd side. Romantic notions should not be a major part of agenda. Stick to goal-oriented procedures.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Long-range prospects come into focus. Capricorn and Cancer persons figure in scenario. Lunar position highlights travel, special publications, communication, philosophical-educational concepts. Older person shows way to transform apparent loss into possible profit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You gain access to credit ratings, financial prospects, potential, investment data which could enable you to successfully close a transaction or sale. Aries, Libra persons — and the number 9 — figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Contractual arrangements, obligations claim attention. Leo and another Aquarian play key roles. New start is necessary. Play with "fresh cards." Message will become increasingly clear. Love is in picture; judgment clouded if you rush into decisions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Job gets done as you gain cooperation from co-worker, one who shares interests and joins you in perceiving potential. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Accent on special services, employment, unusual message from relative in transit.

IF AUGUST 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY ... you possess an abundance of charisma, people are drawn to you, you respond especially well during times of emergency. You have unique way of expressing yourself — part of your personal scenario includes drama, law, medicine and humanitarian gestures which emphasize Golden Rule. You are fiery, stubborn, impulsive and extremely sensitive in connection with emotional responses and affairs of heart. Aries and Libra persons play important roles in your life. September could be your most memorable month of 1980, a year of production, organization, increased business activity and intensified relationships.

'Action' holds ratings

By JOHN GOUDAS

General Hospital's Luke Spencer (played by Anthony Geary) is on the lam, hoping to outsmart Frank Smith and his syndicate boys.

Geary

Supposedly Luke was dead, knocked overboard moments before his marriage to Jennifer, daughter of the suave mob boss Frank Smith. Spencer was set to tie the knot in mid-July when Scotty Baldwin rushed aboard the yacht, accused Luke of raping his wife Laura, and — pow! — knocked the bridegroom clean into the drink. The body was nowhere to be found, due to Luke's quick thinking; and Jennifer, the eager bride, has become unhinged over the "loss."

To remain on top of the ratings heap, General Hospital must deliver such zesty action, dished up by the youngsters in the cast, busy bees in the sex department. Hospital is heavy in turn into gangland activities under the leadership of the cultivated oldster Frank Smith (George Gaynes).

Before Luke was to marry Jennifer, he discovered Frank Smith's black book and planned to blackmail his prospective father-in-law as a form of life insurance. In a flash, the tables turned, and the elder Smith clearly preferred young Luke very silent and underground. Luke is a very frightened mouse at this point, now that everyone knows he's not dead.

Such plotting pleases frizzled-headed Anthony Geary, a hot item on General Hospital this spring and summer, playing the kid from the streets, all geared up hungry for action. Although Geary comes from Coalville, Utah, high in the mountains, he's not too far off base in regard to Luke Spencer.

Like his character Luke, Geary likes to roam alone. When not performing or working on properties like Sound of Sunshine, Sound of Rain, a children's radio show that won a Cindy award, he is out hitchhiking, preferably in faraway countries where he doesn't speak the local language. He also likes the challenge of survival and the testing of his own resources. So far he's still alive.

Geary would be quite happy and content on the run, much like the predicament facing his character Luke Spencer.

A man like that deserves a nod. Then he says, "My fantasy is to roller skate down Mount Everest."

Is Anthony Geary crazy? Just enough to make him more interesting than your run-of-the-mill actor. Stay tuned.

Channel Chatter: Carrie Mowery has replaced the glamorous Cindy Pickett (who opted not to renew her contract this year in order to pursue other career interests) in the role of Jackie Spaulding on Guiding Light. The producers must have been pretty impressed by the aspiring young actress as the role marks Carrie's first major career break...

Post-Newsweek Productions is currently developing a new daytime drama for national syndication. The show, entitled Young Lives, is an ongoing drama for and about teenagers.

There has been much talk about how daytime carries over into prime-time. Well, that certainly holds true for Edge of Night, as the mail concerning Sharon Gabet's Raven has increased tenfold since she's become sexier and more devilish than ever.

by mike lamm

Dear Mike:

I get about 12 mpg with my 1975 Chevelle (307 and automatic). The primary jets inside the carburetor have holes in them that accept a #54 drill bit. My question is this: Could I fill in these holes with solder, then drill the jets out with a smaller bit, and save fuel that way? If so, how small can I go without getting poor performance or burning valves?

Thinking

Dear Thinking:

Your is an intriguing idea, but you don't have to go to all that trouble. You can buy smaller jets at any large carburetor supply warehouse. Tell them the number of your carburetor (it's on the little brass tag that's attached to the float chamber), and they can look up the various sizes available. They can also suggest any mating jets you might need.

Dear Mike:

What makes my 1973 Nova with the manual 3-speed jam in neutral sometimes? My mechanic says he can't do anything about it — that's the way it is. Could you comment, please?

Up A Tree

Dear Up:

It's not "the way it is." You've either got worn rubber grommets in the linkage, or the linkage needs adjustment, or the detent in the shifter tube inside your steering column is goofed up. Find yourself another mechanic.

Dear Mike:

Just within this past week, the red oil-pressure warning light in my 1976 Dodge Aspen has started to come on when I make a sharp left turn. This car has the 360 V-8 and 35,000 miles. The light never comes on when I turn right — only when I cut hard to the left. I thought perhaps the oil level was low, but the dipstick shows full, and the filter is new. What gives?

Blinky

Dear Blinky:

The oil pump pickup in your engine floats on top of the oil supply, as it does in nearly all modern engines. This is to keep it from drawing up sludge from the bottom of the pan. If a sharp left-hander throws the pickup up off the surface of the oil — as on the curl of a wave — the pump takes in air instead of oil, which cause your light to come on. What to do about it? Frankly, there's not much you can do short of taking it easier on left-hand turns.

Dear Mike:

In answer to "Cemented In," who splashed concrete onto his car — tell him to try muriatic acid. Concrete is soluble in a 10% solution of muriatic acid. But be extremely careful: wear gloves, rinse generously with water and soap, and keep the acid off chrome, because it discolors it.

Acid

Dear Acid:

Many thanks for the tip.

CBC building a steal at $1.5M, CFRE believes

Anyone buying the CBC's new but unused television studio at Blanshard and Kings would be getting a steal — about $1.5 million from the taxpayers' pocket, the treasurer of the CFRE Public Broadcasting Society said today.

"Anyone buying that building now would get a sizable discount on it," said John Elliot. "While some $3.5 million in tax money has gone into it, it would only sell for about $2 million.

"The CBC will lose because that building was built for television — built physically as a television studio. A first-class studio. Few expenses were spared. It's a Cadillac, to a degree."

Elliot joined other CFRE executive Thursday night in Newcombe Auditorium where 207 people turned out to hear his explanation of how the society hopes to take over the studio for a province-wide public network.

CFRE's projected capital and operating budget includes the options of leasing the studio from the CBC — or any government agency that might buy the facility — for $300,000 a year.

"We're not asking to be given the building — we just want time to establish credit and credibility through membership and community support," said Elliot. "With or without this particular building, we are working to the point of raising $5 million annually. If we can demonstrate this, we can borrow the rest."

Elliot said CFRE will embark on a grass roots subscription drive with an initial goal of 20,000 members at $5 each. This, he said, would create a vacuum for government support.

At Thursday's meeting the politicians were there listening — Victoria alderman William McElroy, New Democrat MLAs Charles Barber and Gordon Hanson and Conservative MP Allan McKinnon.

They watched NFB films, slide showings on television production and were briefed on the CFRE alternative by director Barry Cult and Kim Martin and Susan Evans, president and secretary respectively.

They also listened to the vice-president of the Association for Public Broadcasting in B.C., Tom Shandel, who urged the crowd to look to Ontario's multi-million dollar public television network — and not the CBC or KCTS Channel 9 — as the model for public network potential in B.C.

"Some of us think of the CBC — with its dalliance with the commercial format — as public television," said Shandel. "Or KCTS in Seattle — where we send three quarters of a million dollars annually when the majority of programming has no interest in B.C. — sure, we'll all watch Nova, but what about Stepping Out in Seattle?"

Shandel, a Vancouver filmmaker, says both KCTS of the PBS and the CBC each have a bit of what is embodied by TV Ontario which has an annual budget of about $21 million.

"It is remarkable — purely provincial government fulfilling a full range of cultural and educational obligations," he said. "In B.C. we have a total education budget of over a billion dollars. If one per cent of that were devoted to a regional television system, that would be $12 million a year — way more than TV Ontario started with."

In B.C., he said, the education ministry has started the KNOW network — a daytime "hard" education distributor — and that KNOW could be inegrated with CFRE to provide evening programming.

"We would hope the government would join our system or vice versa — we don't feel posessive of the outcome," said Shandel. "And right now it would seem timely to liberate the CBC building for the purpose it was originally intended. We've paid for it once, why should we pay for it again?"

Elliot said the 450-member society's next meeting will be telecast this fall through cable. In the meantime, he said, memberships are available by writing CFRE, P.O. Box 202, Main Post Office, Victoria.

You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all-correct solution. If more than one all-correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all-correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

10. Entries must be mailed to Prevue Payoff Puzzle, Victoria Press Ltd., Box 300, Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4. One entry per envelope.

11. Prevue reserves the right to correct any typographical errors which may appear during the puzzle game.

12. Puzzle clues may be abbreviated and such words as AN, THE and A omitted.

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE is the intriguing word puzzle game the whole family will enjoy and have an opportunity to win a big cash award every week!

THIS CROSSWORD is not a draw. It tests your knowledge of words and pays off for EVERY correct solution. All you have to do is complete each of the words in a criss-cross format. Clues are provided . . . even a work list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

FILM TREASURE HOUSE, or what's left of it, is hosed down by firefighter in Paris, France after blaze of unknown origin left building in ruins. The building housed thousands of precious original movie reels which were lost in the fire. A spokesman for the World Union of Film Museums said many of the films were the only prints of a number of famous films which are now lost forever.

Feds overspent by $12.13B

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government spent $12.13 billion more than it received in tax money and other revenue last year, the finance department reported Thursday.

In a preliminary statement for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1980, the department said the government took in $40.15 billion in revenues and spent $52.29 billion.

The year before it took in $35.21 billion and spent $46.92 billion, resulting in a $11.70 billion budgetary deficit.

Finance Minister Allan MacEachen has estimated the deficit will be $14.2 billion this year.

In the fiscal year which ended in March, the government spent $8.46 billion on interest payments on debts.

The major source of government income was $24.65 billion in income tax. Individuals paid $16.32 billion of this and corporations paid $7.53 billion. The remaining $787 million came from foreigners who paid taxes on their Canadian investments.

The government collected another $10.36 billion from sales tax and customs and excise duties.

The government earned $3.34 billion on its investments and $1.80 billion from sales of coins, licences and permits, and from post office operations.

The post office brought in $1.11 billion, but cost $1.41 billion to run.

Freedom of press goes awry

BOWDEN, Alta. (CP) — The Parallax, the prisoners' monthly newspaper at Bowden Institute may miss its press deadline this month; its editor has escaped.

Randy Warren Johnson, 20, of Calgary was reported missing at the medium-security penitentiary Thursday afternoon, just after he went to work on the newspaper.

Eggs may go up a penny

OTTAWA (UPC) — The Canadian Egg Marketing Agency announced Friday the ceiling price farmers can charge for their eggs would be raised one cent per dozen Monday to cover higher feed costs.

The agency said it could not predict how the increased amount paid to producers would be passed on to consumers at the retail level.

The announcement came the same week that Liberal MP Warren Allmand, a former minister of consumer affairs, accused the government of increasing inflation by ignoring consumers in making decisions to raise prices.

The marketing agency, which is headed by a board composed of an egg producer from each province, said the western drought has forced up the price of feed.

In addition to the 10 provincial representatives, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan has the right to appoint two members to represent the "public interest," CEMA spokesman Jim Bailey said.

Wide-ranging fare on festival program

Music ranging from Bach and Vivaldi to 19th century Wieniawski and a rarely heard work by contemporary composer Paul Ramsier was the substance of Thursday's concerto program in the Victoria International Festival concert series.

The program also marked the last scheduled appearance for this season of the popular double bassist, Gary Karr.

Partnered by Harmon Lewis at the piano, he performed the Ramsier Eusibius Revisited, a work written by the composer specifically for Karr.

Violinists Yuri and Dana Mazurkevich were featured, first as a duo in Vivaldi's Concerto for two violins in A minor, Op. 3 No. 8, followed by Yuri as soloist in the virtuosic Wieniawski Polonaise No. 2 in D Major.

In a festival that is devoted largely to instrumental music, the presence of singers on a program is relatively rare. However, the festival's parent — the J.J. Johannesen International School of the Arts — conducts an opera centre that attracts young vocal artists of high calibre.

Some of these have been appearing now and then in the festival, and on Thursday's program there were three: Patricia Fournier, soprano, singing the Bach Cantata No. 51, Jauchzet Gott; tenor Robert Missen and baritone Rod Campbell as soloists in two works by Mozart for voice and small instrumental accompaniment — Per Pieta Non Ricercate K. 420, and Rivolgete a lui lo Sguardo K. 584.

William Shookhoff conducted the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra in Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra by Ernst Bloch. The piano obligato was performed by Rachelle McCabe.

The University Centre auditorium was the scene of the concert which attracted a good-sized and responsive audience.

The festival moves back to McPherson Playhouse Sunday for a concert of solo and chamber music in which bassoonist George Zukerman and oboist Bert Lucarelli will make their first appearances as the festival's midway point is reached.

Cancer rumor is denied

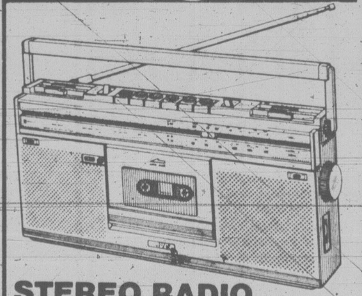
WIN A summerfunthing

Play it daily and be eligible to win weekly prizes. It's easy and it's fun — just follow the instructions below . . .

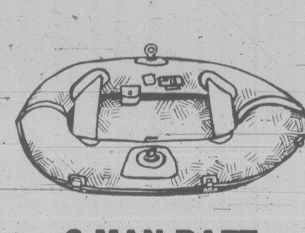
THIS WEEK'S PRIZES

1st



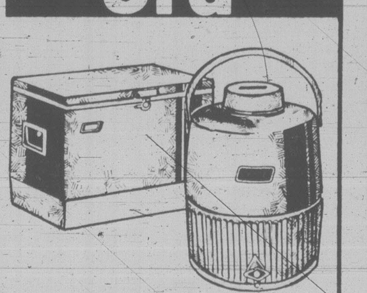
STEREO RADIO CASSETTE RECORDER

2nd



3-MAN RAFT WITH OARS AND PUMP

3rd



PICNIC SET (Cooler & Jug)
4 sets to be won

HOW TO PLAY

Locked inside the "SUMMERFUNTHING" safe are many valuable prizes. Some of those prizes could be yours if you find the correct PASSWORD that opens the combination lock. It's an exciting game that's fun and easy to enter. The instructions on the dial give you the position of the letters in the "SUMMERFUNTHING" PASSWORD. All you have to do is find the first letter to start. For instance, suppose you started at the letter E and the instructions read 2nd LETTER-FOUR COUNTER CLOCKWISE. Count four spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter E and you arrive at the letter A. The next instruction reads 3rd LETTER-EIGHT COUNTER CLOCKWISE, so count off eight spaces in a counter-clockwise direction from the letter A and you arrive at the letter S. Finally the 4th letter. SIX CLOCKWISE means you count in a clockwise direction from the letter S and you arrive at the letter Y. In this example the PASSWORD is the word E-A-S-Y. To give you another clue and to add to the interest, each day's password is scrambled and you will find it at the bottom of the illustration.

GAME RULES

1. Winners will be chosen by random drawing from all valid entries. All winners must answer a skill testing question.
2. Winners from the previous week will be published in the Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist.
3. It is not necessary for contestants to buy the Colonist or Times to enter the SUMMERFUNTHING contest. An exact drawing of the entry form printed in the Colonist or Times may be made on a plain piece of paper. Note: copies produced by any other process will not be accepted.
4. The SUMMERFUNTHING judges will have the final decision on any interpretation of Game rules.
5. As a condition of receiving prizes, recipients agree to allow publication of their names and pictures in the Colonist or Times for no additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all rules. No prize substitutions.
6. The contest is open to all readers of the Daily Colonist and Victoria Times on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. Employees of Victoria Press and their immediate families are not eligible to enter.
7. In fairness to all, the Colonist or Times cannot answer questions or respond to phone calls or letters regarding THE SUMMERFUNTHING CONTEST.
8. All winners will be determined by a random draw from all valid entries.

HOW TO ENTER

Complete the puzzle and fill in the "PASSWORD" on the entry form. Clip out the entry form and send it to us in an envelope with the puzzle number printed in the top left hand corner of the envelope. (As illustrated.)

Be sure to include your name, address and phone number on the entry form.

Enter as many times as you wish but make sure each entry is in a separate envelope.

Mail your entries to:
"Summerfunthing"
Post Office Box 1390
Victoria, B.C.
V8W 3C4

or drop your entries off at Victoria Press
2621 Douglas St.
Monday through Friday
8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

A new puzzle will appear each day, but the weekly winners will be selected from all entries submitted for the previous week's puzzles.

To be eligible, your entry must be received by 5:30 p.m. on the Thursday following the week the puzzle was published.
Enter daily, or as often as you wish, but be sure each entry is submitted in a separate envelope.

LA CAGE AUX FOLLES ("BIRDS OF A FEATHER")
"LA CAGE AUX FOLLES" 1979 - France Director - Edouard Molinaro In English Subtitles - Homosexuals provide the laughter in this story concerning the conflict that arises when a gay man's son shows up and announces he is marrying a nice girl, and wants her family to meet his folks. "LA CAGE AUX FOLLES" is not only outrageous but also outrageously funny. Nominated for 3 Academy Awards this year. We had been pondering as to running this film on a midnite series due to sub-titles. However, we feel "LA CAGE AUX FOLLES" is a very entertaining and humourous flic which most of our regular midnite patrons will enjoy. If you have vision problems reading sub-titles bring someone who can whisper them to you.

Shultz, seated here in his motorized glider, 'hopscotched' his way to Canada

West German glider pilot flew Atlantic 'just for fun'

TORONTO (CP) — It was a desire to be free and different that led Michael Shultz to embark on a flight across the North Atlantic in his small, motorized glider.

The 33-year-old Volkswagen salesman from Hamburg, West Germany, left his hometown on July 12. He stopped in Toronto on Thursday, but his destination is the Experimental Aircraft Association convention in Oshkosh, Wis., a mecca for fans of home-built and eccentric planes.

He leaves Saturday, weather permitting.

"I've been flying for the past 10 years," he said. "It's a great hobby of mine. I intend to make more trips like this one, but I'll have to wait until next year."

Shultz made his trip, which has cost him $3,000, in a sleek $25,000 Sport-Avia RF-5 glider powered by a revamped VW engine and equipped with a special radio and survival gear.

It has a 13.7-metre wing span and Shultz modified the plane with an extra fuel tank before he started the trip.

Other pilots have made trips across the Atlantic in private aircrafts, but most have had 200-horsepower engines equipped with automatic pilot control. Shultz's plane has a 68-horsepower engine and must always be flown manually.

He made more than 15 stops as he hopscotched over Norway, the Shetland Islands, Iceland, Greenland, Baffin Island, northern Quebec, the north shore of the St. Lawrence River and Quebec City.

"The longest flight time was from the east to west coast of Greenland. I was in the air for seven hours. That can get pretty uncomfortable, especially when I have to relieve myself."

Shultz flew his 650-kilogram, 6.5-metre-long plane at about 3,600 metres. Although the plane can glide without the engine on, the extra equipment forced him to keep it on.

With a gasoline capacity of 146 litres, the plane has an airborne endurance time of 10 hours and a range of 1,600 kilometres.

Frank Eruzese, an air traffic controller at Toronto Island Airport, said: "What Shultz did is unusual, but it's not amazing because he made several stops while crossing the Atlantic."

Shultz's route was almost the reverse of the one Californian Eagle Sarmont had hoped to follow in his ill-fated attempt to reach Paris in a less sophisticated, motorized hang-glider.

"I'm impressed . . . I wish we could have met in crossing," Sarmont said of the exploit in a telephone interview. He was grounded July 21 by Canadian transport officials because his Spirit of California lacked proper registration.

Sarmont and Shultz have never met, but the German said he doubts his hang-gliding counterpart could have made it.

"It's hard to speak for other people. Normally, I think it's impossible. You must have fuel enough for hundreds of miles."

Unions chop dues to CLC

TORONTO (CP) — Affiliated building trades unions are withholding payments to the Canadian Labor Congress in a quarrel that may lead to a break between the construction unions and the congress, says congress President Dennis McDermott.

McDermott said in an interview Thursday that the halt in payments by the construction unions, which account for about 18 per cent of the congress membership, is beginning to hurt but he saw no solution to the problem.

The 14 international building trades unions, with a total of 400,000 members in Canada, are at odds with the congress over a complaint that the congress has ignored encroachments by the Quebec Federation of Labor on the jurisdiction of the construction unions.

The Quebec federation has given a haven to a Quebec breakaway group of 12,000 electricians from the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said Ken Rose, Canadian vice-president of the electrical workers union.

Rose resigned as a vice-president of the congress just before its convention last May.

Feds to test VDTs for CP after all?

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal labor department says it may conduct radiation tests on video display terminals at The Canadian Press news bureau here following a refusal by the federal health department to check the machines for health hazards.

However, labor department representative Albert Pighin said in explaining the policy change Thursday that the tests would be conducted to quell fears and would not be an acknowledgement that a potential health hazard exists.

"If we are to conduct this survey it would probably be because of the emotional nature of the problem," said Pighin, an industrial hygiene engineer at the labor department's technical services division.

E-N appeal holds key to VIA fares

COOPER

VIA Rail is trying to block an appeal by the local E & N Steering Committee that could have far-reaching effects on the national railway passenger corporation's fair structure right across Canada.

Chairman Ald. John Cooper said Thursday VIA wants to short-circuit a planned hearing by the Canadian Transport Committee of his group's appeal against VIA's minimum $4 fare.

The effect of VIA's decision eliminates short commuter runs on VIA routes, like the E & N passenger service on Vancouver Island.

Earlier this summer, the CTC gave Cooper's organization leave to appeal the decision, but still hasn't decided whether there will have to be full public hearings.

VIA has appealed to the CTC's review committee asking that the order allowing the E & N committee leave to appeal be quashed, arguing that the CTC erred on points of law.

The CTC has offered to make a decision without hearings, but Cooper said it would be in the public interest to have an open hearing.

"If we were successful in our appeal it would set a precedent that would have ramifications across Canada," said Cooper.

Legal pressure on risky house

"Every time he turns the washing machine on there's a blue flash."

City engineer John Sansom Thursday described one of the hazards in a recently renovated fourplex at 714 Esquimalt Road.

Owner Richard Richmond did the work without benefit of building permits and electrical and plumbing work was not inspected as required by law.

The city inspection department wrote the owner in June demanding the building be vacated immediately due to its unsafe condition, and city solicitor Jakob de Villiers followed up with another letter in July but the owner has ignored them.

Sansom said the fire department told the city about the building, after complaints from a tenant that every time he plugged in an appliance the fuse blew. Also, headroom is too low in parts of the converted house.

"It's a dangerous situation," said Sansom.

City council's legal affairs committee gave de Villiers authority to apply for a court order which would force the eviction of the four families now living at 714 Esquimalt.

Richmond said later he had offered to correct any hazards pointed out by inspectors and was willing to do the work required by the city.

Symbolic aid for W.C. users

New signs with the international symbol for W.C. will be posted on the Causeway to tell tourists where to find the city-run public washrooms near the intersection of Government and Humboldt.

Council's downtown economic development committee rejected for the time being a proposal to spend $60,000 to renovate the aging johns.

But aldermen agreed with a suggestion from the Visitors Information Centre for better signage.

VIC president Les Wood said tourists are continually asking VIC staff for directions to the nearest bathroom and they usually walk right by the Causeway comfort station which is just outside the VIC's front door.

The committee also decided to encourage the centre in its canvass of downtown businesses which might be willing to open up their facilities to the public if a municipal subsidy was forthcoming.

Oilport hearings bid wins backing

The city supports the Chamber of Commerce's protest to the National Energy Board to have oilport hearings next November staged in Victoria.

Aldermen on the legal affairs committee voted Thursday to endorse the chamber's demand, but stopped short of proposing to appear with the business group as a fellow intervenor before the NEB.

The C of C wants the hearings in the city because Victoria will be most affected by an oil spills if accidents occur at the oilport. Both Northern Tier and Trans-Mountain Pipe have proposals to build oilports near Port Angeles, Wash.

The committee decided to ask the chamber for further information on what role it would like the city to play.

Licensing okay for new cabaret

City council's business licensing committee Thursday said it had no objection to a cabaret going in to the old British Welding premises at Fisgard and Store streets in Chinatown.

Michael Martay, proprietor of Harpo's cabaret, told aldermen he planned to renovate the old brick building and open a cabaret if gets approval from other city and provincial government agencies.

In a letter, he described the project as a cabaret-restaurant with some additional retail space. The night club would hold 225 people and would be open from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m.

God in his wisdom

The boon
his love had given

And though the body
slumbers here

The soul is safe in heaven.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

Heartfelt thanks to the many wonderful friends who helped and consoled me during the illness and subsequent loss of my dear husband Louis. My gratitude to Dr. Wait, and the nursing staff of 3 CE, Victoria General Hospital. Dr. Gloster, and the nurses at Cowichan District Hospital, and especially the nurses of the Home Care Nursing who were so supportive.

My thanks also to Reverend Ellis and Father Salmon, who gave such a magnificent memorial service, and to the Legion and Ladies Auxiliary for participation.

Zona Bauer

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our relatives and friends and neighbours for their acts of kindness. Messages of sympathy, cards, flowers, and donations during the loss of our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Grace Abery. Your thoughtfulness will always be remembered. — Audrey, Watson and Ann Stinson — Pat, Jim, Diane and Darlean Smith.

309 IN MEMORIAM

MARKUSICH - In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, John Ivan, who passed away 7 years ago today.

His memory is as dear today,
As in the hour he passed away.
To us his name will ever be
The key that unlocks memory
Of a dear one gone but cherished yet
A beloved face we'll ne'er forget.

Lovingly remembered by wife Magda, children Mike, Mary, Ann, Helen, Nada and families.

SHORT-In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister Doreen who passed away August 8, 1977.

A light is from our household gone.
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
Some may think you are forgotten,
Though you are on earth no more,
But in memory you are with us,
As you always were before.

Lovingly and sadly missed by her mother Minnie, brother Ron, sister-in-law Louise, brother Albert, sister-in-law Sharon, brother Bryan, sister Donna, brrther-in-law Larry and all their families.

Korea seizes 'hooligans'

SEOUL (AP) — A total of 16,599 alleged hooligans, racketeers, gangsters and gamblers have been arrested since Monday in a "special measure to eradicate social evils" launched by South Korea's martial-law government, a spokesman said. The spokesman said those arrested will be screened and referred to court martial. Most will undergo four weeks of "re-education" and some will receive sentences.

Lou Grant has 15 chances

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Lou Grant dominated the Emmy Award nominations Thursday for the second straight year as the threat of an actors' boycott clouded next month's awards ceremony.

The CBS television series about a Los Angeles newsroom headed by Edward Asner collected 15 nominations.

Moviola, a three-part movie series about the early days of the motion picture industry, collected 13 nominations, and M-A-S-H had 11.

Other shows receiving multiple nominations included All Quiet on the Western Front with seven, Amber Waves with six, NBC's The Big Show with six, Baryshnikov on Broadway with six, The Muppet Show with eight and two cancelled NBC series, The Rockford Files with six and Skag with seven.

Lou Grant was nominated as the outstanding drama series and Asner was nominated as best actor in a drama series for his title role as the prototype city editor. The series won last year, but Asner, who was also nominated, failed to win the Emmy in 1979.

The other Lou Grant stars nominated for best supporting actor were Mason Adams, who plays the managing editor; Robert Walden, who plays reporter Joe Rossi; Linda Kelsey, for her role as reporter Billie Newman; and Nancy Marchand, who plays the paper's publisher, Mrs. Pynchon. Nina Foch was also nominated as best supporting actress for a guest star appearance on the series.

CBS's M-A-S-H was nominated as outstanding comedy series and Alan Alda was nominated as best actor in a comedy for his starring M-A-S-H role as army surgeon Hawkeye Pierce. Nominations for best supporting actor went to co-stars Mike Farrell, Harry Morgan and Loretta Switt.

The awards show, scheduled Sept. 7, may be in for trouble if the strike by 60,000 performing members of the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists continues as expected.

Negotiations are stalled at present, and union spokeswoman Kim Fellner said that a boycott of the Emmy telecast was under consideration.

"We are looking at a long strike," she said, "all the way into September."

Zimbabwe minister denied bail

SALISBURY (AP) — The third highest ranking member of the black majority government of Zimbabwe has been denied bail after being charged with murdering a white farmer, court sources said.

Lawyers for Manpower and Planning Minister Edgar Tekere filed a petition Thursday asking High Court Judge T.A.T. Smith to free Tekere on bail, but the judge turned them down without explanation and ordered him held, the sources said. No trial date has been set.

Tekere has criticized Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's moderate policies toward the country's nervous white minority, and he is popular among many younger black Zimbabweans.

The way his case is handled could determine how many of the country's 200,000 remaining whites choose to stay. It also could test Mugabe's support among the radicals in his three-month-old socialist government.

New city hall?

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — A plebiscite will be held Oct. 15 on a city borrowing bylaw to build a new $15.9-million Medicine Hat city hall.

A 1,500-name petition given to council forces the city to hold the plebiscite on its plans to borrow $13.7 million.

Two ready to quit over 'stumbling'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Canadian representative and an American staff member of the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission, which regulates and safeguarding salmon stocks, are ready to quit because of "stumbling Canadian diplomacy" and "danger to the stocks."

Canadian Commissioner Richard Simmonds and assistant commission director John Ruse of Washington state both said Thursday they are ready to resign because of American policies, Canadian unconcern and danger to Fraser River salmon.

The commission was created in 1936 to regulate and assign salmon catches on the Fraser in an attempt to allow Canada and the U.S. to preserve and increase stocks in shared waters.

"The legitimate fishery within our jurisdiction has every right to be furious at what's going on and to be worried about it," said Ruse, a 19-year veteran of the commission.

"We're afraid the whole (Fraser salmon) resource is going to be lost unless they (Ottawa) do something about it."

Union fishermen in B.C. sent a telegram Thursday to federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc protesting violations by U.S. native Indian fishermen of the international salmon fisheries treaty.

The union was angered by the Indians taking sockeye Wednesday night in Puget Sound from the U.S. side of the border.

George Hewison, United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union secretary-treasurer, said up to 300 gillnetters and 25 seiners were taking fish. He said the U.S. government superseded regulations imposed by the commission and allowed the fishing.

The catch would normally go up the Fraser River as part of the major sockeye Chilco run, he said.

Technically, the only legal day for U.S. and Canadian fishermen to fish last week for salmon entering the Fraser was Monday, commission director Al Cooper said, but "Canada and the United States do not agree on an interpretation" of this.

The commission was to meet today to decide what day fishermen will be allowed to fish next week.

Hewison has constantly said that salmon allotments give U.S. fishermen a larger share of the annual catch.

He said that when a U.S. federal judge ruled in 1974 that an old Indian treaty giving Washington state Indians 50 per cent of the U.S. catch was valid, the U.S. set up what has become a second and independent salmon commission.

Ruse said this violates the spirit of the original treaty, which was designed to eliminate dual management of the fishery.

Commission officials have repeatedly asked Ottawa for help but have received no assistance from negotiators, Simmonds said.

Rod Hurston, a federal fisheries official and commission member, said the staff's discouragement is understandable, but unwarranted.

"We've protested every year but until something happens we just play it the way it comes."

Simmonds said the situation is crucial this year because of low runs. "The entire management of the resource is in jeopardy because of this stumbling diplomacy."

So far this year the U.S. has caught about 20,000 more salmon than Canada while total runs have been 50 per cent below those predicted by fisheries experts, Hurston said.

Air Canada's report card better

TORONTO (CP) — Air Canada has begun to improve its image with the travelling public, according to a survey carried out by the United States-based Airline Passengers Association.

The survey, mailed to 37,495 U.S. APA members and 6,848 international members, drew a response of 32 per cent in the U.S. and 18 per cent internationally.

The Dallas, Tex.-based APA, is a lobby group which campaigns to improve airline service and safety. It was this organization that obtained a court order grounding the McDonnell Douglas DC-10s after the American Airlines' DC-10 crash in Chicago, Ill.

In an interview today an APA spokesman said the group has 1,253 members in Canada.

One per cent of U.S. respondents, asked to name their preferred airline on international routes with a choice of airlines, picked Air Canada. This figure was unchanged from a 1979 survey.

But two per cent of international respondents selected Air Canada, up from 1.3 per cent in the 1977 survey.

Asked to name the international airline they would want to avoid, one per cent of U.S. respondents picked Air Canada, down from 1.2 in the previous survey.

Internationally, 3.7 per cent selected Air Canada, down from 3.9 per cent in 1977.

Pan American World Airlines was picked first among U.S. respondents as the preferred airline, while Swissair was selected by international respondents. Pan Am was selected by both groups as the airline they most wanted to avoid.

Major reasons for selecting an airline were given as service in general, flight attendants' service and meals. Reasons for avoiding an airline were service in general, late flights and flight attendants' service.

A spokesman for Air Canada said he is pleased to see more people preferred the Government-owned airline while fewer people wanted to avoid it.

"It's excellent news," the spokesman said. 'It means our effort to increase sales and service is beginning to pay."

Canada's other major international airline, Canadian Pacific, was not picked among the top 10 in any of the categories.

The APA survey also asked respondents to name the best and worst airports internationally. Toronto International Airport, which was used by 8.3 per cent of respondents didn't make the top 10 among the best, but was ninth in the list of worst airports.

Charles De Gaulle Airport in Paris was named the best and Miami International Airport the worst, among international respondents.

U.S. respondents selected Tampa as the the best and Chicago's O'Hare as the worst.

Soviets using gas warfare?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States wants a UN investigation of allegations that Soviet-backed troops are using illegal chemical weapons in Laos, Cambodia and Afghanistan.

Such an investigation could perhaps determine the truth of the stream of reports, mostly from refugees, about sicknesses and deaths caused by various gases, officials said.

A state department report released Thursday on its own investigation concluded it was "highly likely" that illegal gases have been used. But the report mentioned no physical evidence, such as gas samples.

Questions and answers

Q: "I have a fairly large area I'd like to cover with low-spreading evergreens but I shudder at the expense of buying them. Is there an alternative?"

A: Why don't you try producing new speading evergreens from the ones you already have? Probably the simplest way is to push a branch into the soil just a few inches from the tip. You an keep it in the soil with a hairpin if necessary.

It's usually difficult to transplant a large evergreen with the necessary large ball of earth successfully so rooting the tips is a better bet, although of course it does involve a much longer wait than a visit to the local nursery.

Q: "There's been abundant green growth but poor root development in my vegetable crops this year. What could account for that?"

A: It's likely your soil is suffering an imbalance. Excess nitrogen in comparison with other nutrients produces this overly lush green growth at the expense of root and flower formation.

The problem can be overcome by mulching with sawdust which helps use up the nitrogen in breaking the sawdust down. Add a balanced fertilizer with the sawdust or apply a fertilizer rich in phosphorus and potash rather than in nitrogen.

Q: "I've been having rotten luck with my turnips to the point where I'm ready to give up growing them. Any suggestions?"

A: Turnips that crack open and begin to rot are often the targets of unfriendly bacterial action. If you discover maggots in the turnips, make a note mentally or in your garden diary to plant future seed with maggot powder and treat with Diazinon as the plant grows.

Turnips, to be grown successfully, need to be thinned early and spaced widely to prevent rapid spread of any bacterial rot throughout the crop. Always remove any diseased turnips immediately.

Q: "The leaves of my Iris have been turning brown and drying and I'm wondering if there's anything I can do to prevent this."

The condition of your Iris may be due to crown or rhizome rot fungi, or to overcrowding and lack of water. If there are any signs of gray mold, or white fungus threads, remove and destroy all infected rhizomes. And be sure not to replant Iris in that same spot.

Q: "This is the first year I've grown glads and I'm wondering what to do with them this fall."

A: The quality of the gladiolas which grace your vases next year will depend upon how well you look after the corms this fall. If it's a long dry fall, wait for the first frost before lifting them but if it's wet, don't wait too long or the corms could rot in the ground.

A new corm for next year's blooms will have been formed six weeks after the plant has bloomed but throw out any corms which haven't formed these new ones. The old one will appear withered and dry beneath the newly formed corm. Get off the foliage and allow the corms to dry indoors until they can be cleaned up easily without breaking your fingernails.

The used-up dried corm should be removed from the bottom of the new corm. Store just a few to a paper bag with sulphur shaken up into the bag. This will protect the corm from insect infestation. Above all, do not plant glads in any section of the garden where glads have been planted during the last four years.

During the blooming season for glads, it's a fine idea to tour neighbors' gardens for varieties and colors you don't have. Tagging the desired plants for exchanges in the fall is a plesantly social task and an easy-on-the-pocketbook way to increase your stock.

Q: "Is it okay to remove the dying topgrowth from my potatoes?"

A: The standard procedure in home gardens is to wait till the tops wither as this is the sign the tubers are mature. Taking the tops off before that could result in immature tubers high in water content, subject to easy bruising and discoloration, plus they'll not keep well.

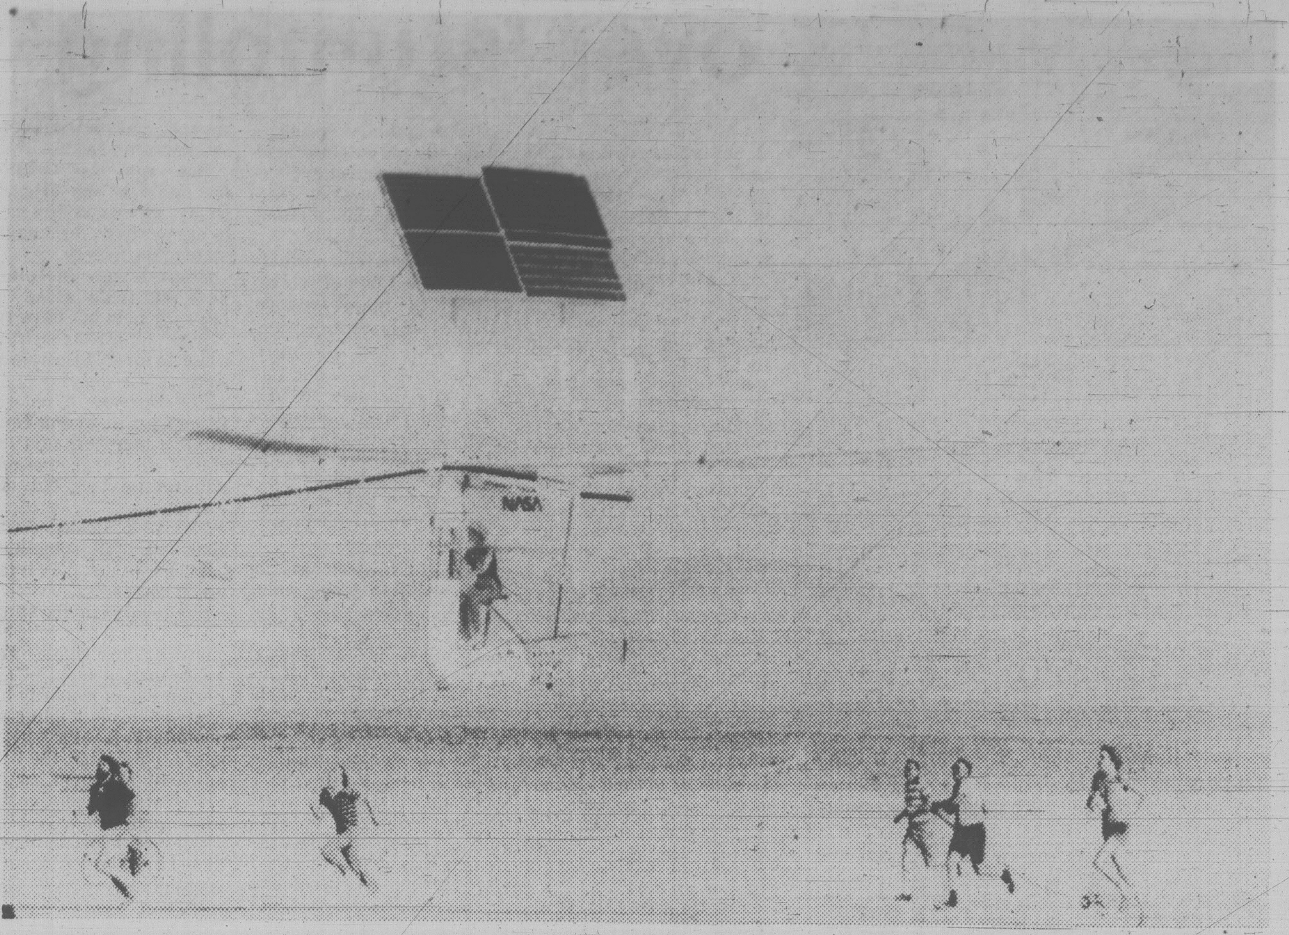
15 bouncing minutes of solar-powered flight



Ground crew runs and pedals after 90-pound Janice Brown and 68-pound see-through airplane

EDWARDS AIR BASE, Calif. (AP) — A 90-pound schoolteacher wrote a footnote to aviation history Thursday by piloting a solar-powered airplane for three bouncing kilometres above a dried-out desert stream bed.

The 15-minute flight by Janice Brown, 32, in the fragile Gossamer Penguin was described as the first sustained flight by an aircraft powered only by the sun.

Paul MacCready, who designed the 68-pound, see-through airplane, said earlier solar aircraft stored electricity in batteries, but the Penguin uses solar cells that convert sunlight into electricity.

MacCready's earlier creations include the Gossamer Condor and Gossamer Albatross. The Albatross won a $213,000 prize last year when a cyclist kept it aloft across the English Channel.

Mrs. Brown, a veteran glider pilot, said the plane reached a top speed of 26½ km/h and climbed as high as 3½ metres as it covered a little more than three kilometres at Edwards Air Force Base.

"There were times of doubt when I started to come down, but then it would get airspeed back" and remain aloft, she said.

The Penguin's bank of solar cells — mounted on a platform above the craft's 22-metre-long wing — power a small electric motor which rotates a rear-mounted propeller.

The plane, its aluminum tube frame covered with paper-thin plastic, resembles a giant insect. A bicycle was used to tow the craft aloft.

Because sunlight is the plane's only power source, a single cloud passing before the sun would have quickly ended the flight. The plane could have glided for about three more minutes under those conditions, MacCready said.

He said he hopes the plane will prove that solar energy can power homes and utilities just as it did his plane.

He said the Penguin was financed by DuPont Co., which invested about $250,000 in the Penguin and a larger successor, the planned Solar Challenger.

MacCready said the Solar Challenger may make its maiden flight in September. It is conceived as a rugged aircraft that could cover 160 kilometres and reach altitudes of more than 3,000 metres with the power of the sun.

Viking I runs down

PASADENA, CALIF. (UPI) — Viking 1 has run out of gas, ending an important part of the four year mission that greatly increased scientific knowledge of Mars.

Scientists at Jet Propulsion Laboratory Thursday sent a command to the satellite to turn off its radio.

Thirty minutes later the satellite went silent, after radioing information back to earth during 1,489 revolutions around the red planet in four years in orbit.

Viking 1 was shut down because it had run out of fuel needed to stabilize it in orbit, aligning its instruments with the sun, Earth and Mars. But it will continue in orbit for at least the next 75 years, scientists said.

The spacecraft's original mission called for it to operate at least three months during the U.S. Bicentennial celebration in 1976, but to the surprise and delight of JPL scientists it continued to function for 49 months, some two years longer than its sister craft, Viking 2, which went dead in July, 1978.

The benefits of a freezer are two-fold. It saves you time (fewer trips to the supermarket) and money (today's rising food prices, for example). And now Eaton's is offering you a third way to save. The Imperial 12.1 cu. ft. chest freezer — exclusive to Eaton's — is on sale 'til 5:30 p.m. Saturday. This freezer holds up to 424 lbs. of frozen foods and is packed with convenient efficiency features and safety measures. In white only. Quantities are limited, so shop early.

2½" Polyurethane Foam Insulation—Provides extra strength and rigidity and cannot sag creating voids and loss of efficiency. Moisture-proof, so the possibility of rusting is eliminated. The insulated lid is flexible so it ensures a tight seal in uneven floor surfaces.

Handy and Convenient Storage Basket—

Exclusive Refrigerant Tubing—Properly spaced tubing in both the liner and cabinet wall, plus Booster Cold Coils on the freezer floor provides the maximum in freezer efficiency.

Safety "Pop-Out" Lock and Key

Recessed Coin-Slotted Cold Control—This extra safety measure keeps "curious little fingers" from making unwanted adjustments to the storage temperature. It's located just to the rear of the "compressor access panel" and can be easily adjusted with a coin or screwdriver.

Chlorine explosion a warning

City fire officials today warned the public to use extreme caution in handling a common chlorine-based disinfectant after the material caused a violent explosion at the city works yard Thursday sending four men to hospital.

Deputy fire chief Fred Severson said the disinfectant, calcium hypochorite, commonly used to clean out swimming pools and shower rooms, reacts violently when mixed with ethylene or glycerol.

He called the risk serious, particularly because the chemicals are present in many common compounds such as grease, oil and anti-freeze.

Thursday afternoon city water works employees Bud Jones and Mike Matthews were pouring some granules of calcium hypochorite into a container in a small room in the Garbally Road works yard when there was a blast.

Both men were knocked across the room. Jones, who was standing over the container, was extensivly burned on his hands and face while Matthews escaped the full blast but was burned on his arms.

Two other employees, George Pakos, 27, and Jim Walker, heard the explosion, pulled the injured men to safety and despite thick smoke and chlorine gas fought their way back into the room to put out the flames with a dry chemical extinguisher.

The incident occurred shortly after 4 p.m.

All four were taken to Victoria General Hospital but only Jones was admitted. He is in good condition.

Pakos and Walker, president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees Union that covers the city's outside workers, were checked for possible lung damage due to smoke and gas inhalation. Matthews was treated and released.

The fire caused about $400 damage.

Firemen, wearing masks and protective clothing, returned to the yard this morning to ventilate the room after workmen refused to enter.

Pakos said it was fortunate more persons weren't injured. The shift was just preparing to go home and within five minutes 15 workers would have been in the room to fill out their time sheets.

Severson said an investigation completed by Insp. Graham McCallum determined Jones and Matthews were using a container that had once contained some anti-freeze.

"There were probably only a few drops left, but that is all it would take," Severson said.

McCallum said that while calcium hypochorite is included in the National Fire Association list of hazardous materials, its dangers are not commonly known.

Severson was concerned about pool owners using old anti-freeze containers to store or carry the disinfectant.

He also noted explosions have been caused by persons dipping into cartons of the chemical with metal scoops contaminated with grease or oil.

But the dangers don't end there, he warned. If the chemical gets damp due to rain or seepage, deadly chlorine gas is given off.

The chemical is safe in areas flooded with water because the gas is adequately dissipated.

Severson said he will ask major distributors in Victoria to warn their customers of the hazards.

Phone call breached privilege

Atlin NDP MLA Al Passarell said Thursday his member's privilege was breached by a Hansard staff member who relayed the text of a speech in the B.C. legislature directly to the Church of Scientology in Vancouver.

Passarell earlier complained in the legislature about a government decision to give 10 acres of Crown land near Atlin in northern B.C. to the church.

He called the church members undesireable and said many members of the sect have been charged with violent crimes.

The speech was relayed to the church's Vancouver office by a member of the legislature's Hansard staff, complete with that staff member's personal opinion and moral judgement of the speech, Passarell said Thursday afternoon.

He said he no sooner finished his speech in the legislature when he got a phone call from a sect member in Vancouver who was upset with what the MLA had said.

Speaker Walter Davidson promised to investigate.

Daring gem heist

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said a young man made off with 32 large diamonds in a daring jewel heist at Eaton's Pacific Centre store in downtown Vancouver.

The man, in his 20s, entered the store just before closing time and asked a clerk to show him the store's largest and most expensive diamonds.

When the clerk turned her back, police said, the man scooped up the jewels and ran out the front door.

No value has yet been placed on the jewels.

Cadbury a candy smuggler?

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — The makers of Cadbury chocolates have been indicted on charges of smuggling chocolates into the United States from Canada, U.S. Attorney William Gray announced today.

A federal grand jury here returned the indictment against Cadbury Schweppes U.S.A., its Canadian affiliate, and four current or past employees.

The indictment charges that the company, in order to circumvent import quotas, brought chocolate crumb into the U.S. under the label "reject candy bars."

Attempts to reach company officials for comment were not immediately unsuccessful.

Mt. St. Helens spewing again

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens shot another plume of steam and ash skyward today in a new "pulse" from the volcano, continuing the activity that began with Thursday's eruption. (See earlier story on page 18).

The pulse — a brief blast that is not strong enough to be considered an eruption — lasted 30 seconds and subsided, he said.

Superstorm has Texas bracing

MERIDA, Mexico (AP) — Hurricane Allen roared toward the Texas coast this afternoon, about 700 kilometres away, gathering strength from warm Gulf of Mexico waters after hitting Caribbean islands where reports from devastated areas boosted the death toll to at least 87.

The U.S. National Weather Service issued a hurricane warning and forecasters said the storm, expected to pick up speed, could send hurricane-force winds slamming into the Texas coast from Corpus Christi to Brownsville by dawn Saturday.

At noon today, Allen was located near 23.8 north latitude and 91.4 west longitude — some 670 kilometres east southeast of Brownsville and travelling west-northwest at 30 kilometres an hour, packing winds up to 230 kilometres an hour, the weather service said.

Hurricane force winds extended outward 120 kilometres to the north and 80 kilometres to the south. Gale force winds extended outward 320 kilometres to the north and 160 kilometres to the south.

The weather service warned small craft from the mouth of the Mississippi river westward to the Mexican gulf coast, including the Yucatan Peninsula and around extreme western Cuba, to stay in port.

Gale warnings were discontinued in the Florida Keys early this morning.

Officials on South Padre Island, Texas, began notifying resort hotels shortly after 11 a.m. to evacuate guests. Across the causeway in Port Isabel, the city had buses ready to take people to Harlingen, 65 kilometres inland.

Texas authorities held planning sessions with representatives of 35 federal and volunteer relief agencies that would go into emergency action if the storm hit.

Texas gulf home-owners stocked up on candles, food and plywood to hammer down windows. Hospitals increased orders for bottled water and Red Cross and Salvation Army officials prepared relief centres and placed workers on alert.

Insurance companies sent in teams to handle those who could be displaced, and oil companies evacuated 2,500 workers from offshore rigs and production platforms.

One helicopter carrying 13 people from one platform crashed 90 kilometres off the Louisiana coast Wednesday. U.S. Coast Guard authorities said at least four of those on board were found dead.

Allen hammered Mexico's northern Yucatan Peninsula on Thursday but caused no injuries or serious damage, government officials said.

Mexico declared a state of emergency on the peninsula's eastern side and Red Cross authorities mobilized relief efforts. Thousands of people fled the storm, including some 5,000 in Cancun, the lush resort on the Yucatan mainland across from Cozumel.

Since becoming a hurricane Monday near the eastern Caribbean island of St. Lucia, Allen has followed a basically west-northwest route in its killer journey across the Caribbean, through the Yucatan Channel and into the Gulf.

Increase in murders in wake of executions

BOSTON (AP) — Statistics indicate the murder rate in New York state increased following the execution of criminals, report two researchers who say the results indicate the death penalty may encourage crime rather than deter it.

"This is a punishment that requires the sacrifice of innocent people," one of the researchers, William Bowers, said in an interview.

He said the study countered the argument of those who contend would-be murderers are deterred by the prospect of being executed for their crimes.

"If executions have a brutalizing effect, as we find, a whole new issue is raised on capital punishment," Bowers said.

In a study to be published in October in The Journal of Crime and Delinquency Bowers and Glenn Pierce say they traced the history of executions in New York between 1907 and 1963. The study says that on the average, there were two additional homicides in the month after an execution.

The researchers, both of whom are associated with the Centre for Applied Social Research at Northeastern University, say the number of murders prompted by executions may actually be higher because their study did not take into account killings in the same month as the executions.

The researchers do not know exactly how executions may provoke homicides, Bowers said.

However, the two say one theory is that people are not deterred from crime by executions because they cannot identify with criminals who are executed.

They also note that two of the three men executed in the United States since the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the death penalty in 1972 said they wanted to die.

Gary Gilmore, executed in Utah in 1977, and Jesse Bishop, executed in Nevada in 1979, asked to die. John Spenkelink was executed in Florida in 1979 against his will.

New York was chosen for the study, Bowers said, because monthly statistics on homicides were kept beginning in 1907 and because New York has executed more people — 695 from 1890 to 1964 — than any other state.

Passenger train off rails

BLUE RIVER (CP) — A Via Rail Canada supercontinental passenger train derailed near Blue River early today.

The train was carrying 360 persons but, said Bill Dewan, a spokesman for Canadian National Railway, only one passenger was apparently injured.

Cause of the derailment, which occurred about 11 kilometres east of Blue River, has yet to be determined.

The lone injury involved a broken arm.

Dewan said the train was eastbound from Vancouver. The first 13 cars in the 19-car train went off the tracks but none overturned, he added.

A special train had been dispatched from Jasper, Alta., about 200 kilometres west of Blue River, to pick up the passengers.

Miracle drug or potential poison?

DMSO — miracle painkiller or a potentially toxic, highly dangerous substance?

That question as yet remains unanswered but some Victoria doctors and a growing number of athletes and arthritis sufferers swear by it.

DMSO — dimethyl sulphoxide — is a cheap and plentiful byproduct of the pulp and paper industry used as an industrial solvent and as a common ingredient of paint-remover.

Its use in the U.S. and Canada as a prescription drug for muscular injuries and arthritic-type conditions has raised controversy, especially since a 60 Minutes TV program this year lauded its beneficial value in the treatment of aching joints.

So far in Canada DMSO is recognized in a recent decision by the federal health protection branch for treating only two conditions: interstitial cystitis (a bladder ailment), and scleroderma (a hardening and drying of the skin related to arthritis, incureable).

But more and more doctors are prescribing it for use as a liniment.

Some users report spectacular results for bruises and other athletic injuries while others swear it helps ease the pain of arthritis.

In Victoria DMSO costs $30 a litre and a prescription of 100 ml for about $3 would last a long time, one pharmacist said.

He said his firm stocks DMSO for prescription purposes and has filled about 30 orders since the 60 Minutes program.

But he added that such programs and newspaper reports about DMSO's pain-treating properties have caused a lot of people to grasp at it without an appreciation of its potential hazards.

Liver damage is one of the possible side effects, he said, and careless or accidental use in combination with toxic substances could be dangerous.

"For example, a person who applied DMSO to his skin then went into the garden and came into contact with pesticide or was stung by wasps could be in trouble," he said, adding that DMSO is a vehicle that transports substances easily through skin barriers to the bloodstream.

Meanwhile, two British researchers familiar with non-medical uses of the compound said here Thursday they are not aware of any harmful effects from it.

No flight plan sparks search

A pilot's failure to close his flight plan triggered an unnecessary air search today.

The pilot, identified only as Marsden, left Dawson Creek at 6:10 p.m. Thursday in a Beaver float plane, saying he was flying to Tatogga Lake.

He asked that a search be started if he didn't report in 24 hours.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said today a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox, working in the Watson Lake area, was alerted and began searching.

Marsden had fuelled at Tatogga Lake and carried on to Pucho Lake.

The Buffalo found the aircraft and the pilot at Pucho Lake after being informed by Trans Pacific, a commercial airline, that he had been spotted in that area.

The search came at the same time the federal government announced it spent $90 million on search and rescue operations last year and saved more than 1,700 lives.

But the government said many of those lives would not have been endangered if the public took the proper precautions when flying or sailing in private craft.

Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne said Thursday $90 million spent last year could well increase this year and next if amateur fliers and mariners don't take responsibility for their own safety.

Arab oil reprisals loom over Israel

United Press International

Ten Arab countries, led by Saudi Arabia and Iraq, are threatening economic and diplomatic reprisals against nations endorsing Israel's claim to sovereignity over all Jerusalem, raising the possibility their oil may be used as a weapon.

Saudi Arabia and Iraq announced in a joint communique Wednesday they will break off diplomatic and economic relations with any country recognizing Jerusalem as Israel's capital.

On Thursday, the two countries were joined by Kuwait, Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Jordan, North Yemen, Algeria and Mauritania.

"The leaders of the eight countries pledged to take a unified stand in the face of Israel's conspiracies and expansionist ambitions," in particular thevote of the Israeli parliament last week making Jerusalem its "eternal" capital, the Kuwaiti news agency said.

Oil was not mentioned, but its use as a weapon was an implicit threat, Western experts said. Oil is by far the Arab world's biggest economic resource — and certainly the one with the most telling impact.

Saudi Arabia is the leading foreign supplier of oil to the United States, and two of the other nations, Algeria and the United Arab Emirates, rank fourth and eighth, respectively.

The Jerusalem issue also dominated other Mideast developments Thursday.

At the United Nations, the special committee on Palestinian rights charged that Israel's Jerusalem declaration displayed "contempt for international law."

Ambassador Falilou Kane of Senegal, chairman of the committee, said in a letter to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim that Israel persistently ignored U.N. resolutions calling for an end to its occupation and annexation of Arab lands.

President Anwar Sadat broke off the Palestinian autonomy negotiations in protest last weekend and sent Begin a letter, rejecting the Israeli move and affirming the Arab claim to the holy city.

Meanwhile, former foreign minister Moshe Dayan said today Israel faces a mounting international offensive that could lead to the end of the Jewish state and said Parliament's declaration of sovereignty over all of Jerusalem — was "totally unnecessary" legislation.

Dayan said the government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin should have ensured the bill on sovereignty over Jerusalem died in committee.

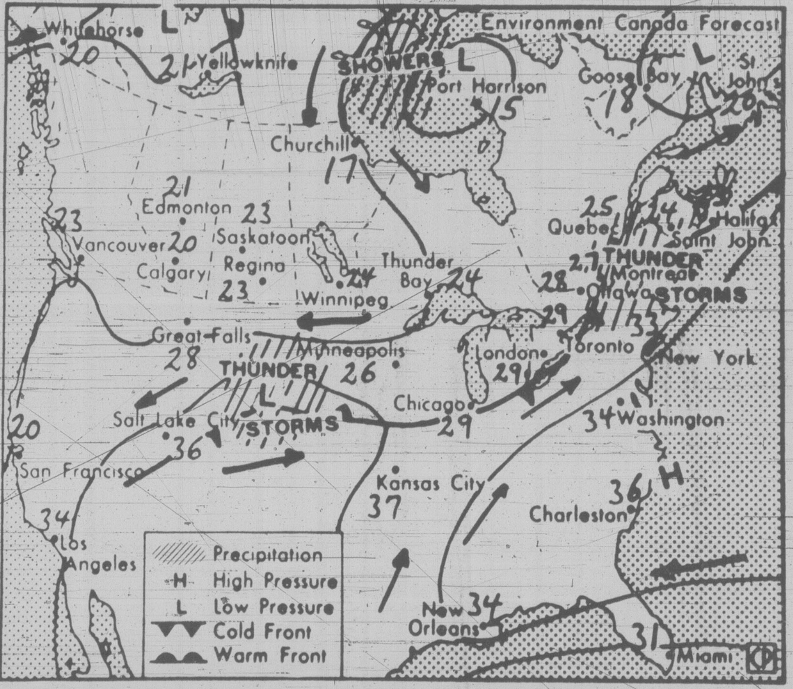
Dayan told the newspapers Jerusalem Post and Yedioth Ahronoth in an interview published today that Israel faced a "very grave" situation because of repeated attacks on it by U.N. organizations and, recently, by Western Europe.

Pop bottle safety cost $35.8M

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal regulations calling for tough, plastic skins on explosive 1.5-litre soft drink bottles will cost the bottling industry about $35.8 million, says the consumer affairs department.

"Most of the . . . costs were attributed to the expense of the coating process," states an analysis of the program.

the weather



Map valid noon Saturday

Low clouds and fog persisted along B.C.'s exposed outer coasts. Skies elsewhere were mainly clear. Isolated showers or thundershowers are still likely to develop during the afternoon but should be confined to the eastern interior. A ridge of high pressure building from the northwest will result in mainly sunny skies over most of the province for the next couple of days. Some cloud and showers will spread across northern portions of B.C. tonight.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was sharply higher in active mid-afternoon trading today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading in shares of Great Northern Financial Corp. resumed at the opening after being halted late Thursday. By 2 p.m. the stock was up ¾ to $5½.

Great Northern Financial Corp. said it has declared a stock dividend of four Colonial Oil and Gas shares for every 10 shares of Great Northern held.

The company also said one of its two major shareholders, Unicorp Financial Corp. and Betrust Investment Corp. Ltd., will acquire the shareholdings of the other by Aug. 12, subject to the completion of certain conditions.

The exchange also said subdivided common shares of Texaco Canada Ltd. will be posted for trading at the opening Aug. 11, replacing currently listed shares. Shareholders approved a four-for-one stock split July 12.

Vancouver

Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 11 a.m. PDT was 3,204,070 shares.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading among industrials and remained steady at $6.65 on 34,730 shares. Keg Restaurants rose .20 to $3 on 11,700 shares, Renn Industries was unchanged at $1.80 on 3,100 shares and Taro Industries gained a dime to $4.40 on 3,000 shares. Proflex Ltd. was steady at .20 and Canadian Javelin Ltd. dropped a nickel to $1.50.

Damascus Resources warrants led resource traders and remained unchanged at .51 on 83,800 shares. Copper Lake Explorations declined a dime to $3.20 on 46,400 shares. Nuspar Resources was unchanged at .78 on 41,000 shares and Kandahar Resources was down a nickel to $2.95 on 39,500 shares. Charleston Resources Ltd. dropped .01 to .64 and CDR Resources Inc. gained .01 to .70.

Crescent Mines Ltd. led curb exchange traders and dropped a nickel to $1.55 on 700,850 shares. Mackenzie Energy advanced .06 to $1.30 on 63,800 shares, Val d'Or Explorations rose a dime to $2.95 on 53,700 shares and Pilgrim Petroleum declined .15 to $3.55 on 41,900 shares. Interlake Development Corp. rose .11 to $1.07 and Eskimo Resources dropped .01 to $1.03.

New York

The stock market rolled up another strong gain in heavy trading today, picking up where it left off in Thursday's powerful advance.

Analysts said the market's recent gains had created a bandwagon effect, attracting waves of new buyers.

For weeks now, many analysts have been warning that the market was overdue for a downward correction.

But that decline has repeatedly failed to materialize, and traders who had been holding back have rushed to join the party.

Merrill Lynch was actively traded, up ¾ to $30¼ and trading at its highest prices in four years.

Brokerage-house stocks have been on the rise for some time, aided by record trading volume in the stock market and this spring's drop in interest rates.

Among actively traded blue chips, General Motors was up ⅝ to $54⅛ and International Business Machines ⅜ to $66⅛.

London

The London stock market was slightly higher near the close of quiet trading today.

The Financial Times index was up 1.4 to 479.6.

Industrials firmed while banks were lower.

Canadian stocks eased.

'Angel' props fading star in The Users

Jaclyn Smith stars as a small-town girl with a dark past who falls in love with a fading screen star, goes with him to Hollywood and masterminds his spectacular professional and personal comeback in The Users, a 2½-hour motion picture airing on the ABC Television Network's "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," at 8 p.m. on Channel 4.

Tony Curtis, Red Buttons, Alan Feinstein, Joan Fontaine, John Forsythe, George Hamilton, Darren McGavin, Carrie Nye and Michelle Phillips round out the starring cast.

In a dramatic departure from her role of Kelly Garrett in the series, Charlie's Angels, Jaclyn Smith plays Elena, an admitted former call girl who gratefully accepts an invitation from veteran screen actor Randy Brent (Tony Curtis) to leave Arizona and live with him in Hollywood. Soon afterward they are married. When Elena sees how Hollywood powers have demoralized Randy, she embarks on a courageous crusade to put him back on top and restore his dignity.

Designed by executive producers Aaron Spelling and Douglas S. Cramer as a glamor movie in the grand Hollywood tradition, much of The Users was filmed in and around the mansions of Bel Air and Beverly Hills. Highlighted is a sequence in which Jaclyn Smith and Michelle Phillips tour elegant Rodeo Drive.

No Other Love.

Emmy Award-winners Richard Thomas and Julie Kavner star in a poignant drama, No Other Love, about a marginally retarded young couple in love, to be rebroadcast Saturday, at 9 on Channel 7.

The drama deals with a young girl who, because of her disability, has been smothered by her well-meaning family and has never been allowed any independence.

Thomas plays an equally retarded, but much more self-reliant, youth who has been encouraged to function to the full extent of his capabilities. The pair meet, fall in love, and plan to be married, despite her parents' attempts to separate them. The determined young couple seeks to convince the concerned adults that they, too, are entitled to a life of their own.

TV Starscene

By RUTH THOMPSON

Two years ago Martin Sheen told us what he prizes most as a working actor and devoted head of a family: "Bring something about the job home to the kids."

He made his first impact on the stage in the Pulitzer Prize-winning play, The Subject Is Roses. Now he is tempted by offers from television and movies. "It's not the medium," he told us (he holds them both in esteem, scoffs at any rivalry), "it is the role" — and if it promises something his children get a kick out of and shows them what he does for a living — so much the better.

Two years ago Martin (remembered for such major opuses on TV as The Missiles of October and Blind Ambition — portraying respectively the martyred John Kennedy of the 1960s and the Watergate key figure John Dean of the 1970s) playfully tossed a heavy object that defied catching. No rubber ball, this. Rather it was a heavy-something that turned out to be the meter used in Taxi, an admirable television movie starring him and which kept him on location in Toronto for nearly two months.

But considering the nature of his latest opus, here's hoping that the Sheens have outgrown their souvenir phase. He will be appearing in a big-screen film, The Final Countdown as a trouble-shooter for small defects who boards a present-day nuclear aircraft-carrier, the "USS Nimitz" (five acres of landing strip, 32 stories high . . . and all of it for real), and whirls through a time-warp. Could this carrier, highly futuristic on Dec. 7, 1941, have aborted the Pearl Harbor trigger to Second World War? Whatever else, it's exciting, but don't expect the navy to let him bring home a carrier.

Besides Sheen, the other stars in The Final Countdown are Kirk Douglas, James Farentino and Katherine Ross. And if the Sheen kids want plot-answers, look at it this way . . . you're in the same boat with the rest of us . . . asking eternally slippery questions . . . but being skillfully engrossed along the way.

TV Mailbag

Could you settle an argument between my father and me. I say the Robinsons of Lost in Space never returned to Earth, and my father says they did. — Joe Abraham, Framingham, Mass.

The Robinsons' roamed the galaxies for three seasons, at the end of which they were still . . . lost in space.

My daughter tells me she heard on TV that Harold Russell who played in The Best Years of Our Lives really was a vet. She says he lost his hands when he was in the service. — Anthony Panella, Wolcott, Conn.

Russell, who won an Oscar for his role as the WW II vet who had to learn to use hooks in place of his missing hands, really was a Second World War veteran who lost his hands during the war. He was a Canadian paratrooper.

I have a question about the series, Kung Fu. Who played David Carradine as a young boy, and what is he doing now? — G. McDaniel, Longview, Wash.

A young actor, Radames Pera, played Kwai Chang Caine in flashbacks. Pera was a regular on Little House on the Prairie, during the '76-'77 season as Mary Ingalls' love interest.
